LOCAL TYPHOON "BLOW" NOW FAIRLY CERTAIN

HEADING THIS WAY

STORM RAGING AT THE PRATAS

200 MILES S.E.

There is every prospect of Hongkong being in for a nasty "blow," even if the typhoon at present moving towards the Colony does not actually strike us.

Last evening, it was notified by the Royal Observatory that the typhoon was situated to the west of the Balintang Channel, moving N.W. and therefore threatening the coast near Hongkong.

The report issued by the Observatory this morning states that the typhoon is about 200 miles S.E. of Hongkong, moving N.W. or W.N.W.

The No. 7 signal, indicating the likelihood of a gale from the N.E., was hoisted shortly after 7 o'clock this morning. According to this morning's forecast, N.E. winds, fresh to a gale, with rain, are expected.

MOVING SLOWLY.

Yesterday, the typhoon was moving rapidly, but it has since slowed down considerably, and, consequently, it is difficult to say when its worst effects will be felt in Hongkong. Bad weather is, however, anticipated later in the day. There is a possibility of the typhoon passing somewhat to the south of Hongkong.

A gale has been blowing at Pratras since 10 o'clock last night, but up to this morning the weather was fairly normal at Gap Rock.

26 YEARS AGO.

It is interesting to note that the anniversary of the big typhoon of 1906 occurs on Sunday, 18th instant. In that disaster, fifteen Europeans, including Bishop Hoare, and some 10,000 Chinese lost their lives by drowning.

Over 2,400 Chinese craft were lost, while 140 European vessels and launches either foundered or were badly damaged.

CLAIMS AGAINST CHENG

THREE ACTIONS ADJOURNED

At the Supreme Court this morning before Mr. Justice Wood, three claims for $1,000 each which were brought by the China Finance Corporation against Chang Kwok-yau, who was sentenced to death on Wednesday for procuring the murder of George Fung on March 24, were adjourned sine die.

Mr. Prentis, for the complainants, said he had written to his clients in Shanghai and was awaiting further instructions. Mr. D. L. Strellett appeared for defendant.

FOUNTAIN PEN THEFT

PICKPOCKET SENT TO GAOL

Sentence of two months' hard labour was imposed by Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Police Court this morning, on a coolie who was charged with larceny from the person of an unknown Chinese of a fountain pen.

Defendant was seen to pick the pocket of a Chinese as the latter was about to board a bus outside the Star Ferry Pier, Connaught Road. A district watchman, who had shadowed the defendant, went after him and when he brought him back to where the pen was stolen the complainant had gone, having apparently boarded the bus without realising that he had been

The Earl of Harewood, who gave evidence before the Sweepstakes Commission yesterday.

LEGALISED SWEEPS—

LORD HAREWOOD'S OPINION

JOCKEY CLUB IN OPPOSITION

(Special to "Telegraph").

London, Sept. 15. From the standpoint of horse-racing interests, the Jockey Club opposes sweepstakes.

This statement was made to-day by the Earl of Harewood, husband of the Princess Royal and the Senior Steward of the Jockey Club, giving evidence before the Royal Commission on Lotteries and Betting.

SMALL SWEEPS INNOCUOUS.

Lord Harewood acknowledged that small sweeps were innocuous, but the big ones, he said, resulted in a swelling of the field with horses which have no possible chance of winning.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

A more serious objection, said Lord Harewood, remained in the opportunity for fraud offered by sweepstakes. There would be less danger to sporting interests if sweepstakes were legalised and placed under some form of Government control.—Reuter.

SILVER RATHER EASIER

DOLLAR REMAINS UNCHANGED

The Hongkong dollar remains unchanged to-day at 1s. 4d., but the undertone of the market is on the easy side.

Silver declined 1/16th spot in London, and is unchanged forward. India bought and sold, and China bought. There was small business. After the official fixing, the market ruled quiet, with American inclined to sell.

In New York, silver prices have receded 1/8th to 23.1/8. The market is dull.

TATE TAKEN ILL

IN BED WITH HIGH TEMPERATURE

MAY NOT GO WITH M.C.C. TEAM

London, Sept. 15. Maurice Tate, the famous Sussex and England bowler, has been taken ill and it is extremely doubtful whether he will be able to accompany the M.C.C. team which is sailing on Saturday.

Tate was packing his luggage for the journey, when he suddenly complained of feeling seriously unwell and was sent to bed with a high temperature.

Apparently he is suffering from nervous trouble due to over-exertion.

The illness may clear up as quickly as it came, but should it happen that he is unable to go to Australia, it will be a severe blow to D. R. Jardine's team. Tate has been consistently successful on Australia wickets, and holds the Test record for most wickets in a rubber, set up in 1924-25 when he took 28 wickets for 23.18 runs apiece.—Reuter.

U. S. AMATEUR GOLF.

QUIMET FAVOURITE

THE SEMI-FINAL STAGE

CANADIAN BREAKS COURSE RECORD

Baltimore, Sept. 15. Francis Quimet is now a strong favourite for the American Amateur Golf championship, his three most fancied rivals being eliminated to-day in the quarter-finals.

Only one foreigner remains in the contest, Somerville, the Canadian amateur, who displayed brilliant form to-day, breaking the course record in beating Blaney.

In the second round, Yates, the conqueror of Eric McRorie, was eliminated by the American Walker Cup player, McCarthy, who was himself ousted in the quarter-finals. McCarthy beat Yates by two and one and lost by one up.

Somerville, playing Blaney, did the first eighteen holes in 68 strokes, two under par.

QUARTER-FINALS.

The results of the quarter-finals, which were played over thirty-six holes, follow:
Somerville (Canada) beat Blaney (Massachusetts) 6 and 5.
Guilford (Mass.) beat Chick Evans (Chicago) 5 and 4.
F. Quimet beat Fischer (Kentucky), by one hole.
Goodman (Nebraska) beat McCarthy by one hole.—Reuter.

LOCAL DOCTORS BEREAVED

DEATH OCCURS OF MRS. TO MING

It is with much regret that we have to record the death of Mrs. To Ming, widow of the late Dr. To Ming, of Canton, at the advanced age of 85 years.

The deceased lady, who was well-known and widely respected in Hongkong, was the mother of Dr. Coxson To, medical practitioner of Hongkong; Dr. Herbert To, dentist of Hongkong; Dr. To Tat-chiu, dentist of Canton; and of the late Dr. Y. K. To. She also leaves three daughters, eighteen grandchildren (including Dr. Ernest To, son of Dr. Coxson To), and four great-grandchildren, as well as a sister, Mrs. Tang Ping-shi, of Canton, who is 91 years of age.

JAPAN'S REQUEST TO LEAGUE

DELAY IN EXAMINATION OF LYTTON REPORT

NO WISH TO STOP ITS PUBLICATION

GENEVA, SEPT. 15. THE REAL PURPOSE OF THE CALL OF MR. SAWADA UPON THE LEAGUE SECRETARIAT TO-DAY IS REVEALED IN AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY SIR ERIC DRUMMOND.

Sir Eric says that Mr. Sawada to-day handed to the Secretary-General a Note requesting a delay in the examination (not the publication) of the Lytton Report, pending the receipt of Japan's considered observations thereon and the arrival at Geneva of a special Japanese representative.

In the opinion of the Japanese Government, the preparation of Japan's statement and the arrival of a special envoy at Geneva would occupy a period of six weeks from the date of the receipt of the Report.—Reuter.

FRANCE AND GERMANY ON JAPAN'S RECOGNITION OF MANCHUKUO

Paris, Sept. 15. The French Government had not to-night received an official notification of Japanese recognition of Manchukuo nor the Chinese Note of protest against the development.

It is understood, however, that France would not consider taking isolated action, but will keep in close touch with Britain, the United States and Geneva.

It is felt in Paris to be essential to take cognizance of the Lytton Report before an opinion can be expressed.

While the Paris newspapers generally maintain the same expected reserve as official circles, Le Temps foresees "disagreeable surprises in the Far East" and remarks that elementary politeness should have prompted the parties concerned to await the Lytton Report and the conclusions of the League upon the Report before taking a step which will so profoundly affect the problem of Sino-Japanese relations.

Le Temps hopes that Japan will in no case withdraw from the League since, it is of opinion, such a step would only transfer the problem from the League to the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, which it is everybody's interest to avoid.

Concluding, Le Temps urges Tokyo to reflect on what is authorized by defence of a legitimate interest and what is forbidden by respect of rights within the bounds of international co-operation and undertakings signed in good faith.—Reuter.

RIFT IN BRITISH CABINET

SIR H. SAMUEL MAY RESIGN

London, Sept. 12. A ripple has been created in political circles by rumours, as yet neither officially confirmed nor denied, that a crisis has developed in the Cabinet.

The alleged crisis is attributed to disagreement over the agreements recently reached at the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa.

It is reported that Sir Herbert Samuel, the Home Secretary, is thinking of resigning, together with several of his followers, in which case the Government would be Berlin, Sept. 15. Official recognition of Manchukuo by the Japanese Government has not evoked much surprise as the development was anticipated.

Official circles declare that German political interests in the Far East are not in any way at stake as far as trade relations are concerned.

It is pointed out that Japan has always favoured the Open Door and that no intimations have been received from the German Government's representatives in the Far East that Japan has changed its views.

The newspapers give considerable prominence to the Protocol ratification and also to the Chinese protests, but so far they have refrained from comment.

RUSSIA AND U.S.A.

The one exception is the Monarchist journal, Kreuzzeitung, which fears the intensification of Sino-Japanese tension might lead to war without a declaration.

The journal also expects that Russia and the United States will seize this opportunity of abandoning their disinterestedness.—Reuter.

MORE WAR LOAN CONVERSIONS

HOLDERS CHANGE THEIR MINDS

London, Sept. 15. The "money" market has been cheered by an official announcement made to-day that conversion requests continue to arrive in respect of the 5 Per Cent. War Loan.

The total applications for conversion have now reached £1,885,000,000, according to the statement issued at the headquarters of the National Savings Committee by General Sealey. The total redemptions applied for amount to £28,000,000.

Redemption forms for £2,500,000 have been formally revoked by holders who have changed their minds. In addition, holders of £1,200,000 in stock or bonds have applied for their holdings to be exchanged in another form.

A balance of £112,000,000 remains in respect of which no action has yet been taken.—British Wireless.

It is reported that M. Poincare is returning to French politics. He will seek election to the Senate next month.

GANDHI TO BE FREED

GOVERNMENT AND FAST THREAT

PROPOSALS OUTLINED

London, Sept. 15. The Government's intentions regarding Mr. Gandhi, in view of his vow to begin on September 20th a "fast unto death," were announced in the Legislative Assembly at Simla this afternoon.

The proposals are set out in the following statement issued by the India Office in London:

"Gandhi has made it clear, by his correspondence with the Prime Minister that he proposes to starve himself to death, not as a protest against his detention, or against the measures taken to deal with civil disobedience generally, nor with the object of securing his release, but on a point of principle which is not related to the civil disobedience movement.

AT LIBERTY.

"It has been decided that as soon as Mr. Gandhi actually begins his fast he should be removed from jail to a suitable place of private residence and the only restriction that will be imposed upon him there, as at present contemplated, is that he should be served with an order directing him to remain there.

"It is hoped that it will prove unnecessary to impose any further restriction on Mr. Gandhi but this is a matter that will depend primarily on whether the liberty accorded to him is found to lend itself to the promotion of the civil disobedience movement, or any similar agitation directed against the Government, or to affect the maintenance of law and order."—British Wireless.

COTTON DISPUTE DISCUSSIONS

SETTLEMENT HOPED TO-DAY

London, Sept. 15. A joint conference of representatives of employers and operatives in the manufacturing section of the cotton industry held a further meeting to-day, and will resume its efforts to secure a settlement of the dispute tomorrow afternoon.

Meanwhile, a sub-committee is proceeding with the discussion of questions on the agenda, which are grouped under four headings:—Firstly, the re-establishment of collective bargaining and the restoration of agreements; secondly, machinery to ensure the honouring of any agreements reached; thirdly, wages; fourthly, reinstatement.

MYSTERY AEROPLANE

STRANGE MACHINE OVER KAI TACK.

FLYING IN THE MOONLIGHT

A mysterious aerial visitor to the Colony late last night has aroused the interest of the local authorities who are endeavouring to trace the identity of an aeroplane which was sighted over Kowloon Bay.

A report emanating from the Kowloon City Police Station indicates that the unknown visitor was seen flying over Kowloon Bay just before 11 o'clock last night in bright moonlight. It was carrying a light, but, beyond that, nothing further was distinguishable.

After circling above the Bay it headed in the direction of Repulse Bay.

The Director of Air Services has no knowledge whatever of the aeroplane, and the Divisional Superintendent of Police for Kowloon has requested police stations to communicate with him if the machine has since been seen.

GERMAN EQUALITY CLAIMS

London, Sept. 15. Germany's arms equality claim and the impending resumption of the Disarmament Conference are affording lively topics of discussion in interested circles.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, the President of the Disarmament Conference, speaking to-day at the National Peace Council luncheon, said:

"I cannot bring myself to believe that the statesman who will assemble at Geneva in the next few days are prepared to take the responsibility of encouraging a competitive race in armaments and the inevitable danger of war arising from the existence of armies, navies and air forces."

"The apprehension that exists in no way causes surprise, but I do not fully share the apprehension because I am convinced that the failure of this Disarmament Conference would be a terrible disaster in the life of Europe and the world."

"I refuse to contemplate a failure."

Referring to Germany's equality claim, he thought they could go forward with their work next week feeling that with good-will and conciliation this incident could be settled to the advantage not only of Germany and the vanquished countries but of Europe and the world.—British Wireless.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney.

I believe that one of the most common faults of even the average bridge player is that he does not know when to sacrifice a trick. Quite often it is necessary to give up one or even two tricks in order to make a trick for yourself.

In the following hand, the declarer should not try to take the finesse as it will do him no good—he still must lose a trick in the club suit, therefore he should lose it immediately and not sacrifice an entry.

|           |         |
|-----------|---------|
| 10-4-2    | 8-5     |
| A-Q-J-5   | 8-7-4   |
| 10-7-6-2  | 2       |
| J-8       | Q-8-5   |
| WEST      | 4       |
| NORTH     | AK-10-3 |
| EAST      |         |
| SOUTH     |         |
| Declarer  |         |
| AK-K-6-3  |         |
| K-6       |         |
| A-9-3     |         |
| A-Q-7-6-5 | 77      |

The Bidding.

The contract bidding would be South one club, West pass, North one heart. South would then bid one spade. Here we have two one over one bids—each forcing. North should then bid two no trump because he has the diamond suit stopped. South would then take the contract to three no trump.

The Play.

It would be East's opening lead and his proper play would be the four of diamonds as it is his longest and strongest suit, and in addition it is the only suit that was not bid by the opposition. The jack should be played from dummy, West winning with the ace.

West should not make the mistake of returning a small diamond but should return the nine of diamonds so as not to block the hand off—the three spot will allow him to go through the North hand. The nine of diamonds will be won with dummy's king.

Some players would now make the mistake of leading a heart to declarer's ace so as to take, the club finesse, but you can see that regardless of the distribution a club trick must be lost, therefore the proper play is to lose it immediately and the five of clubs should be played from dummy.

West should go up with the nine in an endeavor to hold the trick so that he can come through the diamonds, but North would play the jack and East would win the trick with the king.

East had now better cash his queen of diamonds or he will lose it, and the declarer wins the remaining tricks, making four no trump.

GOLDWYN'S SUEB BY MR. RENALD COLMAN

Hollywood, Sept. 15.

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, the film producer, has offered an apology to Mr. Renald Colman, who is claiming $2,000,000 against Goldwyn Productions for alleged libel.

Mr. Renald Colman, who is working under a contract with Goldwyn's, complains that a statement, made by them to the newspapers, casts aspersions on his character and acting ability. Reuter's Special.

RECOGNITION OF MANCHUKUO

JAPAN'S ASSURANCE TO POWERS

Japan formally recognised Manchukuo yesterday, and the terms of the recognition treaty are published.

The Protocol which was signed at Changchun (also known as Hailu) is forwarded for publication by the Japanese Consulate General, Hongkong. It is as follows:

Protocol.

"Whereas Japan has recognized the fact that Manchukuo, in accordance with the free will of its inhabitants, has organized and established itself as an independent State; and whereas Manchukuo has declared its intention of abiding by all international engagements entered into by China in so far as they are applicable to Manchukuo; now the Governments of Japan and Manchukuo have, for the purpose of establishing a perpetual relationship of good neighborhood between Japan and Manchukuo, each respecting the treaty rights of the other, and also in order to secure the peace of the Far East, agreed as follows:

1. Manchukuo shall confirm and respect, in so far as no agreement to the contrary shall be made between Japan and Manchukuo in the future, all rights and interests possessed by Japan or her subjects within the territory of Manchukuo by virtue of Sino-Japanese treaties, agreements or other arrangements or Sino-Japanese contracts, private as well as public.

2. Japan and Manchukuo, recognizing that any threat to the territory or to the peace and order of either of the high contracting parties constitutes at the same time a threat to the safety and existence of the other, agree to co-operate in the maintenance of their national security; it being understood that such Japanese forces as may be necessary for this purpose shall be stationed in Manchukuo.

The present protocol shall come into effect from the date of its signature.

The present protocol has been drawn up in Japanese and Chinese, two identical copies being made in each language. Should any difference arise in regard to interpretation between the Japanese and the Chinese texts, the Japanese text shall prevail.

In witness whereof the undersigned, duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed the present protocol and have affixed their seals thereto.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Cherry Dixon, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, married Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter, after a quarrel with her parents. It is a Leap Year marriage and Cherry does the proposing.

She and Dan move into a cheap apartment, and Cherry's first struggle with housework is discouraging. Dick Shannon, movie critic of the News, is friendly. Cherry meets handsome Max Pearson, also of the News, who tries to make love to her. After several weeks Cherry's mother becomes seriously ill. The girl goes home and there is a reconciliation with her parents. Pride will not allow her to accept financial aid from them however. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon depart, seeking another climate to improve the mother's health. Brenda Vail, magazine writer, comes to Wellington and Dan meets her. She asks him to collaborate in writing a play. Dan begins to spend most of his evenings at Miss Vail's apartment. Dick tries to warn Cherry that there is gossip about Dan and Brenda but Cherry will not listen.

After a day of housecleaning when Cherry is tired and nervous she and Dan quarrel. He goes to see Brenda who leads him to believe she is in love with him.

CHAPTER XLI.

Cherry sat in the window seat and looked out at the only tree in sight. Some of its leaves had blown to the ground but those that remained were bright yellow. They danced in the sunlight, the very emblem of carefree gaiety.

Cherry did not even see the dancing leaves though she was staring at them. There were tiny vertical lines between Cherry's brown eyes. The eyes were broadening and serious now. Cherry's lips pressed together in an anxious line. She was struggling with the most difficult problem she had ever faced.

The situation was terrifying. She had felt it daily for the past week. The thing that frightened her was nothing you could put your finger on and say. "This is wrong. We'll correct it." It was something intangible. Something Cherry was powerless to combat because she could not even name it.

In some way a barrier had risen between herself and Dan. She could not see over this barrier or get around it. Dan was one side, and no more quarrelling between them. Ever since the night of the argument about the house cleaning Dan had been meticulously polite. He left the house early each morning and usually arrived late at night. When he came home for dinner he departed almost immediately. Cherry was too proud to inquire how he was spending his time.

She went about the housework, cooked the food he liked, made herself attractive, for the hour when he arrived—and would have died rather than let him know how she was suffering.

It had been five days now since the dreadful night.

"It was my fault—partly," Cherry told herself for the thousandth time. "I shouldn't have let myself get so tired and nervous and I shouldn't have complained about the work."

But there was the matter of pride, too. If Dan had made the slightest move toward reconciliation Cherry would have met him halfway. He hadn't—and therefore affairs were as they stood.

Suddenly Cherry got to her feet. "This won't do!" she scolded. "There's no use sitting here worrying. I'm a little fool to imagine a lot of things that aren't true. Probably that's the whole trouble—I've been letting my imagination get the best of me. Now I'm going to quit it!"

For the rest of that day she was determinedly cheerful. It was not easy but when doubts arose Cherry closed her mind to them. Moreover she outlined a course of action. Something was to happen within two days that she felt sure would restore her happiness.

"I won't tell Dan!" she thought.

Cherry said casually at dinner that evening, "I've some shopping to do."

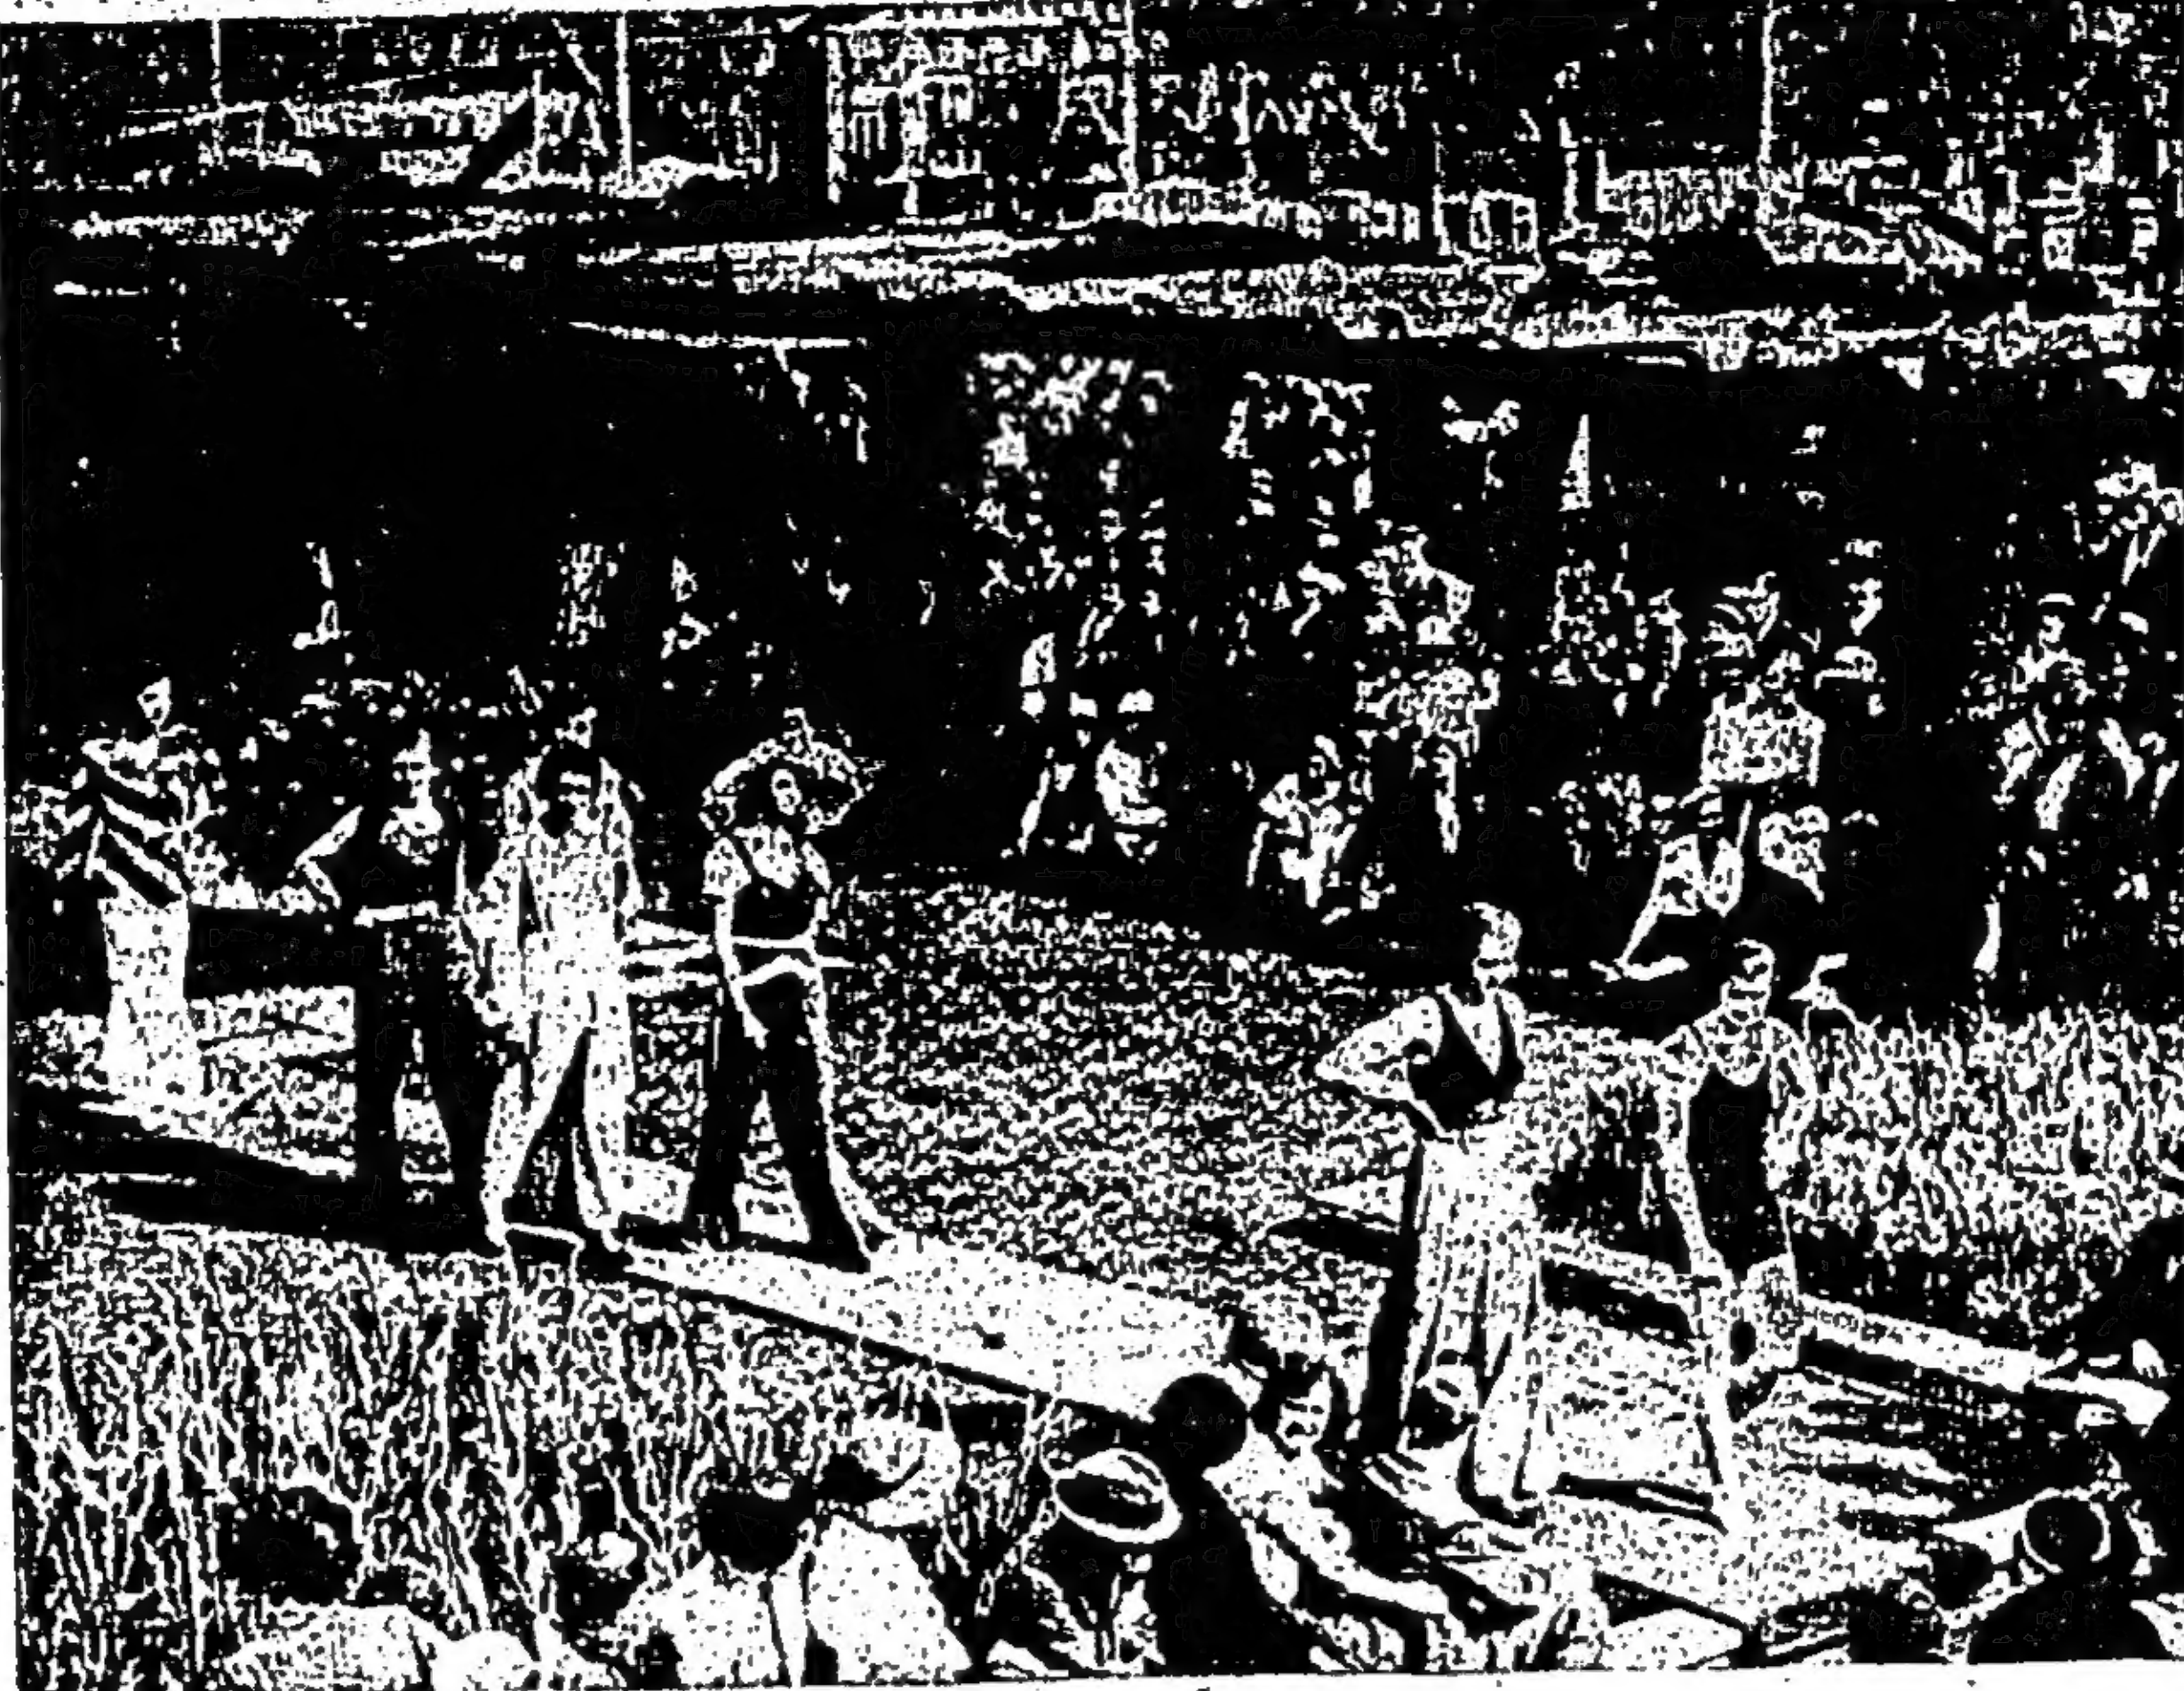

Photo shows the latest London innovation, a bathing beach parade in the heart of London. It was taken on the roof garden of a fashionable dressmaker's in the West End recently.

No "keep off the grass" signs on the Oregon Capital grounds at Salem. The Secretary of the State opined: "there is plenty of grass, plenty of rain and plenty of sun, so he placed signs like this to invite feet to the greenward."

down about 12:30 and have lunch with you. Will that be all right?"

Dan did not glance up from the newspaper beside his plate. He said, "Yes, I guess so."

"I'll meet you in front of the library," Cherry promised. "I'll be there at 12:30."

The young man nodded agreement. He did not leave the apartment as usual after dinner but flung himself down on the davenport with a new book. Cherry felt this was encouraging. She was happy as she went about clearing the dishes from the table. She washed them and put them away, taking care to be quiet so as not to disturb Dan.

"Everything's going to be all right," she assured herself. "I'm sure of it!"

But there was disappointment ahead. Dan did not come home for dinner the following evening. Cherry would not let this make her downcast, however. She was pinning her faith on her plans for Saturday.

DREAM OF DESTINY

By Arnold Bennett.

She intended to remind Dan in the morning that she was to meet him at noon. She meant to speak of it the last thing before he left the apartment but somehow he was gone before she realized it.

At 11 o'clock she telephoned the office but Dan was not there. "It doesn't matter," Cherry assured herself. "Dan never forgets anything." It was true that his memory was unusual.

While she dressed she planned how to break the news. They would go to Stanley's for lunch. It wasn't terrifically expensive and besides this was a special occasion. While Dan was reading the menu she would say, "I'd like that special ice cream for dessert—Stanley's special they call it. It's appropriate to-day."

Dan would be sure to ask what she meant and then Cherry would say, "Why, dear have you forgotten? It's our anniversary. We've been married six months to-day!" That was the surprise she had in store. The anniversary was exactly what was needed to end this foolish misunderstanding. After

Chicago police held Dr. William A. O'Brien, 41, for further investigation into the supposed suicide of his wife, Mrs. Vera O'Brien, 28, after tests with a lie detector brought the admission from the radiologist he had lied in some particulars in his first story to police. Mrs. O'Brien died of poisoning. Handwriting experts declared a suicide note found beside her was a forgery.

of sacrificing his pride. They would recall memories together. He would tell her how happy he had been during those six months and what a wonderful wife she had been. Oh, yes, everything would be as Cherry had planned! They could spend the afternoon and evening together. They could forget the rest of the world. There would only be she and Dan! Reconciliation would be all the sweeter after the bitter loneliness. Cherry's thoughts drifted. The important thing was to let Dan know she wasn't angry with him, to give him a chance to tell her he had been miserable these last few days as she had been.

She bathed and patted on the delicately scented bath powder that was her dearest luxury. She got into brief, lacey undergarments, new hose and her best pumps. As she touched her cheeks with the pink pad from her rouge box Cherry was as careful as she had ever been when dressing for an engagement with Dan before their marriage. She made her mouth into a vivid rosebud with lipstick.

She put on a brown frock, adjusted the little hat smartly and slipped into her pole coat. A bright scarf relieved the sombre monotone. Cherry took a last glance into the mirror. Her eyes glowed with anticipation. Yes, she was satisfied with her appearance. If she met anyone she knew at Stanley's she need not feel ashamed.

The ride down town on the trolley required only 15 minutes but Cherry allowed herself more than that. She left the house promptly at 12 o'clock and 20 minutes later had reached the library. Naturally Dan was not in sight. He would probably be late.

Cherry walked leisurely along the block. The day was older than she had realized and she pulled the collar of her coat snugly about her throat. A woman wearing a handsome mink wrap passed and Cherry thought ruefully of the beaver coat that had been a gift on her last birthday. The coat was in storage and if Mrs. Dixon had been at home she would probably have insisted on Cherry wearing it. Cherry promptly forgot about the fur coat. Two young men were crossing the street and for a moment she thought of

ELIZABETH AND THE ELIZABETHANS

ARRANGEMENTS FOR LOAN EXHIBITION.

The brilliant success of the Charles II. Exhibition held last winter in aid of the Y.W.C.A. has encouraged its promoters to undertake a second exhibition in the same cause during the coming winter. Charles II., an improbable historic patron for the Y.W.C.A., succeeded in raising nearly $1,000 for the organisation from the 20,000 visitors who went to Grosvenor Place to study the relics of his reign. A more likely figure, Queen Elizabeth, will form the centre of the new display, which will represent the life and achievement of the Elizabethans.

The arrangements so far made were discussed in an interview with Miss Elmina Wade (the daughter of the sculptor), who is again acting as organising secretary. "We want," she said, "to keep strictly within the reign of Elizabeth, and to represent it not merely by the relics of the Court or by the books and manuscripts of the great Elizabethans (though these must form a part of the exhibition) but by the tangible remains of the everyday life of the period. Thus there is quite an amount of genuine Elizabethan panelling in store from houses that have been pulled down. We hope to be able to borrow some of this and re-create in one of the houses in Grosvenor Place (again kindly lent by the Duke of Westminster) one or two completely Elizabethan rooms, to be furnished with the oak furniture of the time, and decorated with Elizabethan portraits.

"Tapestry, needlework, costumes, and silver of the time can be properly displayed, while other rooms will contain various personal mementoes of individual Elizabethans. We know of a pipe smoked by Sir Walter Raleigh (his 'History of the World,' alas, falls into the next reign), and we may be able to collect some of the maps and globes used by the great explorers. The Royal suitors make an interesting group to bring together, and the relations of Elizabeth with France and Spain and with Mary, Queen of Scots, will be illustrated as part of the political history of the reign. Such events as the Armada, the foundation of the East India Company, and the Royal Exchange all lend themselves to commemoration, and the part which Restoration science played in the Caroline exhibition can be replaced here by the figures of Elizabethan stage. Shakespearean exhibitions have not been uncommon, but men like Ben Jonson, Spenser, Sir Philip Sidney, Drayton, Marlowe, and the rest of the Elizabethans have seldom been commemorated.

"Among the patrons who have already promised their support to the exhibition are Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll, and two other members of the Royal Family, Princess Marie Louise. Our chairman, Mrs. Arthur Grenfell, is being assisted by Lady Lyons, the wife of the director of the Science Museum, and the selection committee, under Mr. E. M. Konstam, K. C., includes Mr. J. G. Mann of the Wallace Collection, Mr. Basil Long and Mr. Clifford Smith of the Victoria and Albert Museum, and Mr. W. G. Constable of the Courtauld Art Institute, among other authorities upon the period. Among the members of the general committee are Sir Vincent Baddeley of the Admiralty, Professor Neale of London University, and Miss Gertrude Kingston.

CINEMA "SHOTS" AND "SEQUENCES"

"BUT THE FLESH IS WEAK"—Inimitable Robert Montgomery gives another very convincing and charming performance in this latest picture of his which comes to the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. Starred with him is Nora Gregor, a newcomer to the American screen, who scores a brilliant success. Witty and sophisticated, the film is in adaptation of Ivor Novello's play "The Truth Game".

AFTER the brilliant success of the British-Paramount in their production of Reserved for Ladies, one hardly expected them to fall down so badly as they do in their second offering to Hongkong audiences which takes the form of Man of Mayfair. Frankly I am disappointed in the picture. Careless direction ruins the work of such capable players as Jack Buchanan, Joan Barry and Warwick Ward, whilst a surfeit of "mother-love" philosophy (which in itself is trite) obliterates the few intervals of gay action and laughable lines.

CONTRADICTION

WHEN I started to compare the gay, happy-go-lucky and charming Jack Buchanan of Monte Carlo with the irresolute, haggard-looking, disinterested Buchanan of Man of Mayfair, I found myself forced to search for the reason for this contradiction. The most cursory analysis sends one back to the director. These delightful touches of Ernst Lubitsch in what was probably one of his greatest pictures are missing in Man of Mayfair. Jack is submerged beneath a series of quasi-comedy cum melodramatic cum philosophic sequences. The film gives Buchanan an entirely new personality and not a flattering one at that. The only affiliation between the two is the actor's sartorial perfection, and, thank heaven, not even an incompetent director and ridiculous dialogue can rob the "Best dressed man in London" of this peculiarity. The great disappointment of Man of Mayfair is that it is a film of tremendous possibilities, of which advantage is never taken. The story is light and entertaining, there are at least three clever and positively witty lines, and excellent opportunity is given by the author for some amusing character studies. But the director is so intent upon "putting across" the mother-love interest (it starts in a Mayfair drawing room and works up to a terrific crescendo in a village tea house), that Jack Buchanan, complete with song, voice, feet, that dance, lips that form one of the most appealing smiles on the screen, and a couple of interesting situations, is completely lost.

POOR TECHNIQUE.

UNFORTUNATELY, the defects in story presentation and character studies are not relieved by good cinema technique. Twice bad cutting ruins two scenes, and although at the opening there is an attempt to infuse a rhythm in the cutting, it is lost in the succeeding sequences which are drawn out to insufferable lengths. One feels the need of Frank Tuttle's hand with his extraordinary creation of atmosphere in

Queen's "Night Court."
Central "Caught Cheating."
Majestic "Dracula."
Oriental "Wings."
Garden "Fifty Fathoms Deep."

This is the Night. Photography can be marked down as good, but the sound is a most uncertain factor and numbers of lines are lost through fading, whilst in the opening scene, the very heavy work of the orchestra is far too amplified, drowning the actors' dialogue and creating an annoying distraction. The picture comes to the King's Theatre on Sunday next. You will certainly find it entertaining, and, had it been directed by Lubitsch, would undoubtedly have been a really fine picture. See it, anyhow.

INGENUOUS TUTTLE.

OF an entirely different calibre was This is the Night, which held sway at the King's during the first part of this week. In many respects a film of outstanding merit, it boasted, apart from the interesting study it made in cinema technique, the achievement of being really entertaining and amusing. Frank Tuttle, its efficient and not unimaginative director, is obviously a disciple of Lubitsch, and furthermore this film proves that he definitely has a flair for the same type of material as that so successfully exploited by the inimitable German producer. But This is the Night was the first outstanding picture made by Tuttle. His early work such as Love Among the Millionaires, Sweetie, and others, which have been seen in Hongkong, were very ordinary in type and could not be regarded as serious attempts to express modern cinematic art.

CLEVER SOUND EFFECTS.

WHERE Tuttle scored such a success in This is the Night was his quick recognition of the necessity of creating an atmosphere and rhythm by short sharp shots and the ingenious use of sound. In this respect he borrowed from Chaplin's ideas as expressed in City Lights, and we saw the same principle applied, with equal success in Sunshine Susie. It threw the audience into a spirit of gaiety

"MAN OF MAYFAIR" SPOILT BY BAD DIRECTING

FILM OF LOST POSSIBILITIES

NOTES AND NEWS BY "CELLULOID"

providing the required stimulus for full appreciation of the subsequent scenes and studies. His use of sound effects in the early sequences demonstrated "once again" what a perfect medium of expression they can be—much more perfect than spoken lines. Used in their correct form they possess a wealth of detail which spoken dialogue, unless allied to perfect expression on the part of the speaker, can never give. Of the players there is little need to say anything. Charles Ruggles and Roland Young were given studies which allowed them full scope for their talents, whilst Lily Damita was delightful. From every viewpoint the picture was a remarkably fine achievement and goes along way in raising the prestige of Hollywood.

EPIGRAMMATICAL ROBERT.

IT looks as though Robert Montgomery, having discovered his niche as a purveyor of sophisticated wit and epigrammatical dialogue, is doomed forever to bear the burden of his load. He is given a typical part in the latest picture of his to come to Hongkong, But the Flesh is Weak, which opens a season at the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. He talks his way out of delicate and indelicate situations, throws in his disarming smile here and there, and generally speaking gives a performance guaranteed to amuse the men and captivate the women. The picture is the screen version of Ivor Novello's stage play The Truth Game, the story of which gives a somewhat false impression of the British aristocracy. Many will declare that the new screen find, Nora Gregor, captures the honours, whereas Montgomery's admirers will probably claim that it is his greatest work to date. In many respects it compares very favourably with Private Lives, though the situations are not handled with quite the same effect. The entertainment value of the picture, that is of the transient type, cannot be denied. It offers a splendid way of passing an idle hour.

EQUALITY IN ARMS

The German claim to equality in armaments with France raises an issue of vital importance, not only to these two nations, but to Europe generally. French rejection of the demand has moved Britain to take an interest in the subject, with the prospect of consultations between the Powers principally concerned. It is early in the day as yet to judge whether Britain's mediation will produce useful results, but it is at least reassuring to feel that some effort is to be made to work on an agreed basis on this problem, which has long been the subject of much heart-burning in Berlin. The chief necessity, of course, is to eliminate any latent feelings of distrust between the principal European nations.

The French attitude on armaments is, as we know, dominated by considerations of "security." Quite recently, on the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, M. Herriot declared that a heartfelt desire for peace had inspired all her actions, but the keynote of the occasion for the French people was said to be one of "Remember." Some time prior to this, President Lebrun, after stressing that France wished peace, added "But let no-one ask her to abandon her concern for security; so long as the spirit of peace does not reign everywhere." Turning to Germany, it is pertinent to point out that General von Schelcher, Minister of Defence, after calling attention to the fact that the French military budget is four times as large as Germany's, recently declared that "either the disarmament provisions of the Treaty of Versailles must be applied to all the Powers, or the right to rebuild her system of defence and make it invulnerable."

typical utterances serve to show that what one nation may see as "security," its neighbour may regard as insecurity to itself. To take the present instance, there is not only French security; there is, as one writer has pointed out, likewise Sicherheit; and every other nation can translate security into its own terms. Even so, none by its own estimate of necessary arms would achieve security. And so the process can go on, with no finality in view. To again quote from a recent comment, "Germany may interpret Sicherheit as an equality with French armaments and insist that the Council of the League of Nations remove the restrictions placed upon her at Versailles. And should Germany build up to the present French strength, France would have to increase her military power four times to retain her relative position. Thus the attempt to obtain security by arms leads to rival attempts which destroy security."

How can real security be achieved? Assuredly not by encouraging the spirit of competition in armaments. Rather is it to be found by the directly opposite process. It has been said, with some measure of truth, that the most secure nations in Europe to-day are probably those with the smallest armaments. There must be co-operative effort, based on a sincere desire to peace and ruling out mutual suspicion, if the desired end is to be attained. Hitherto, quite apart from the German claim, much difficulty has been encountered in seeking to arrange an equitable scheme of disarmament, but the end in view is well worth straining every nerve to attain. Let us hope that out of the demand now put forward by Germany, there may arise a new and even better effort to banish the fears of fresh antagonisms and hostility.

Herrings and Whitebait.

The remarkably large catches of herrings recorded from Yarmouth yesterday would arouse a keener interest if the British people valued this adaptable fish at its true worth. The customary disdain, indeed, almost deserves to be numbered among the many eighth wonders of the world. It is only in the best clubs and the best restaurants in London and the provinces that one can be sure of finding the fish which ought—so abundant is the supply and so various its virtues—to be the staple food of the British people. And this widespread neglect of potentially the cheapest food supply available to any country in the world is not more surprising than the apathy which is beginning to show towards another English delicacy—whitebait. This, according to reports, has been the worst whitebait season for more than 60 years. It seems probable that the young whiting which prey on whitebait near the coasts have been this year rather more deadly than usual. But a far more likely explanation of a falling supply is a falling demand. The fact is that it is ceasing to pay anyone to catch whitebait, because the restaurants and the fishmongers buy so little. It is impossible to blame them. Their clients have either lost the taste for whitebait or never acquired it. Yet the flavour of freshly cooked whitebait is one of the most distinctive and satisfying that any man can experience. In France blanchailles are deservedly honoured. Whitebait suppers at Greenwich and elsewhere after a dance were a tradition of Victorian England. Gourmets still prize whitebait, but apparently only gourmets. Like other good things whitebait is tall trouble. They are cheap to buy, but not cheap to cook, since they require a good deal of oil or butter. And they lose their superb flavour very quickly. So neither the housewife nor the restaurateur is inclined to bother in the absence of a firm public demand. There should be served rapid advance in the science of preserving food, we know comparatively little at present about the science of keeping fish, not only fresh, but as fresh as when it left the sea. Important research work is being conducted in connexion with these problems. The experiment of drying kippers instead of smoking them is one result. In the meantime no sensible man or woman will maintain what has become the traditional attitude towards the herring. He would perhaps be more appreciated if he cost more.

YOUNG MEN AND THEIR CAREERS

By THE EARL OF BIRKENHEAD

THE conditions governing the entry of young men into the world to-day are radically different from those which obtained in the idle pre-war days. Then, so we are told, it was almost customary for the young men to lounge gracefully through life doing nothing.

Some, fortified by a large private allowance, would don the uniform of the Brigade of Guards; others, perhaps, would live in their country houses peacefully mismanaging their accounts. There was a certain stigma attached to commerce; and the Bar was by no means the crowded profession it now is, and offered a certain advancement to talent.

They All Work.

There is nothing more curious than the manner in which the war has altered these conceptions in the minds of young men. What was once graceful has now become contemptible. I know scarcely any young men who do not do some form of work; for those few there is a definite feeling of pity and contempt.

Men whose forbears have for generations decayed happily on their country estates work nine hours a day in city offices; even young men burdened with vast unearned incomes catch the infection, and cast round for some occupation which will rescue them from the odium of the drone.

This tendency is well illustrated at the universities to-day. In the old days many men went up to Oxford and Cambridge from Eton and other great public schools without the slightest intention of passing an examination; they were not even troubled with an entrance examination; but by paying a certain sum of money they were able to slip deftly through the gates.

To be a Suffragette.

Once there, "work" occurred to their minds about as often as the Babylonian Empire; they played games, hunted, shot, drank, and went down.

Now such a life is impossible even for those who wish to lead it: there are entrance and preliminary examinations which have to be passed, or the man is sent down. Besides, there are few men now who go to the universities with such ideas, and the standard of industry is now higher than at any time before.

Thoughts of a career and misty ambitions in that direction stir very early in the human mind. At seven my own career was mapped out. I was to be an engine-driver, and flash northwards on the plate of the Flying Scotsman; a railway accident soon banished this ambition from a mind never very robust, and I next decided to be a doctor, and to devote a well-spent life to alleviating some distresses of motherhood.

Luckily for my potential patients this ambition deserted me when I was twelve; and was replaced by a keen desire to become a suffragette, an ambition which was in its turn discarded owing to the difficulties of changing sex.

Literature claimed me next. Here I was given the lead by my sister, who, at the age of 15, wrote a powerful novel called "The Willful Curate," dealing with a Hampshire incumbent who went to the bad in the New Forest. Fired by this example I produced a self-analytic autobiography at the age of 14 which, had it been published, would have made Beverley Nichols's "Twenty-five" look like the memoirs of an octogenarian.

Games Worship.

The atmosphere of school soon corrected these humanistic tendencies. Here was a new career to be hewed out from a new and peculiar quarry. One looked round and considered what was the surest way of achieving success at school, of becoming a big figure, and so having a good time.

The answer was by excelling at games. There was no other avenue: scholarship was useless, literature distrusted. So we concentrated wildly on games, and those of us who were good at them were raised at once to a wholly spurious eminence. I remember a young band of enthusiasts who tried to break through the rigid tradition of athletic supremacy. They had pale, eager faces, B.B.C. voices, and willowing waists.

Disciplined Habits.

They collected in corners and conferred on mysterious names, Baudelaire, Ibsen, Matisse . . . The cult made little progress, and I remember that it was forcibly broken up when one of its members was heard saying to another in the school stores: "Cedric, don't you think the sound of running water is perfectly heavenly?" As I have said, for those who go to it the university gives another twist to men's conception of their careers. They go there for the most part to work; at school their one interest is to avoid it. They become adepts at all forms of evasion.

Now they find that at the university they will not be unduly goaded and driven; their hours and their routine will be left to themselves. Their leisure will not be intruded on, but if they do not pass their first examination they are sent down, and if they do badly in their finals they largely discredit themselves in the eyes of the world.

It is there that so many men learn for the first time the habit of disciplined work. Before I went to Oxford I was incapable of prolonged concentration, because I had never occasion to practise it; my time at Oxford certainly taught me that habit. It is often said that the schools and universities of England are of no use to a man in his future career. To that I would reply that it depends entirely on the man. If a man does not want to educate himself there is not the slightest object in his going to Oxford.

Crowded Professions.

The hunting is better elsewhere, and the climate is foul. If he does, he can derive incalculable advantages from his time at the university. There are excellent facilities for every form of study, there is rough and formidable competition, and there is the opportunity, which other men do not get, of finding one's intellectual level. As to the public schools, why argue about them? Simply take a look at the young men who have been privately educated.

The rush to work has crowded the professions, and it is no easy choice, which faces even our intelligent young men to-day. The Bar is slow and precarious, the City depressed, letters the domain of the few. I admire those enterprising people who defy unemployment by breaking new ground.

I knew one man who made a large sum by the mass delivery of milk; another who borrowed G. K. Chesterton's ingenious idea and, preparing questions and repartees, hired himself out to be scored off in company by his clients; another who became the proprietor of an air-taxi, and, lastly, a young man who, sent from home by his exhausted parents to find work, was discovered in the hind legs of the elephant at the Manchester pantomime.

I hope that most of us will avoid such peculiar refuges. This much is certain: that young men to-day contemplate their careers more seriously than they ever have before, and are working at them far harder than they ever did of old. This should be remembered by all those who spend their time crabbings the present generation: there is always the useless minority trailing their alms across the surface of society; and it is wrong to convey a false impression of the young men of to-day.

NEW K.C.C. PAVILION

FINE STRUCTURE DESCRIBED

CLUB'S PROUD HISTORY

FRESH LANDMARK

MAGNIFICENT and imposing in its artistic facade, grass terraces and splendid interior appointments, the new Kowloon Cricket Club pavilion, which is being officially opened to-morrow, stands as a monument to the progressive policy of the mainland's leading club—a policy which illuminates every page of its history.

Members can rightly feel proud of such a pavilion, for not only is it the finest in the Colony, but it offers facilities for recreations and social activities such as have never before been enjoyed by the club.

An interesting and extremely well produced brochure describing the club house and the history of the club has been circulated by the Committee, and the following extracts give a clear idea as to the magnificence of the new building.

IMPOSING APPROACH.

The New Club-house is situated at the N.W. corner of the Cricket Ground having entrance from Cox's Road and so placed as to allow of a carriage drive and formal garden or forecourt between the building and the road. A car park will also be provided.

This area, when properly completed and laid out, is capable of being formed into a very imposing approach to the Club.

In plan the building is L shaped; the heel of the L is however cut off by the walling forming the main entrance facade 98 ft. long, at the back of which are the administrative offices, the Entrance Hall, Social Rooms and the Social Hall, on the main floor. Above is the Orchestra recess flanked on either side by open verandahs terminated by turrets containing small spare rooms.

As regards the architecture the building may be said to be of modern style with a classic renaissance motif.

THE STRUCTURE.

The structure, although mainly of one storey, has two basements under the main floor situated at the extremity of either wing, the level being six inches or so above the level of the cricket ground. There is also a gallery along one side and one end of the Social Hall, which besides acting the usual part of such a feature serves as a means of access to the open verandah flanking either side of the Social Hall, the Scoring Box and the small rooms in the towers.

The materials used in the construction are, for the walls brick in lime and cement mortar with reinforced concrete columns and support the roofs over the Social Hall, annexes and verandah. The gallery in the Social Hall is of reinforced concrete.

Internal wall surfaces are finished in ordinary plain plaster except in the Central Hall (where the walls are finished in paneled plasterwork) and the lower portion of the Bar Room which is paneled in teak to a height of 7 ft.

All colourwash is of local materials. In order to minimise the cost of upkeep and cleaning, ornamental work and mouldings, internally and externally, have been employed sparingly.

A gallery, varying from 8 ft. to 4 ft. in width reached from the Entrance Hall on the main floor by a short stair, traverses one side and one end of the Social Hall.

TURFED TERRACES.

Space 18 ft. by 15 ft. is provided at gallery level and over the Entrance Hall and Lobby for a Dance Orchestra.

Doors from the gallery lead out to the open verandahs or flat roofs which should provide pleasant accommodation for members to watch games or enjoy the open air. (The supports for this verandah have been designed with sufficient strength to support a roof over the verandah).

A Scoring Box 13 ft. by 12 ft. is placed in the centre of the verandah facing the Cricket Ground. In the gable on the main roof above the Scoring Box is provided a space for a clock.

Between the Social Hall verandah and the Cricket Ground and in the resultant angle formed by the wings of the building is a turfed terrace 50 ft. wide and 90 ft. long, formed at a level half way between cricket ground and Club-house floor level.

Letters of administration have been granted to Woo Lim-shi, widow of the late Mr. Woo Lim-shi, who was shot dead.

TWO LEFT IN NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE

Starr Holds Brooklyn to Two Hits

New York, Sept. 16. Brooklyn have definitely surrendered any remote hope of the National League pennant, going down to defeat before the Cardinals to-day. They were blanked out, Starr allowing only two safe hits. Collins hit a homer for the Cards.

Pittsburgh and Chicago who remain to contest what struggle may be, both won, though the Cubs took eleven innings to squeeze home 8-7 against the Giants. Ott and Gengish hit for the circuit for the Giants and Cuyler and Hartnett for the Cubs. Klein hit a home run for the Phillies to place Cincinnati permanently in the cellar.

Kamm and Cissell (Cleveland), White (Detroit) and Manuash (Washington) hit some home runs in the American League, in which all three leaders were defeated.

APPEAL DISMISSED

Sequel to Official Secrets Act Case

Sir Herbert Wilberforce, Chairman of the London Session, refused the appeal of Frederick Henry Budgen, a reporter on the Daily Mail, against the sentence of Sir Charles Byrom at Bow Street of two months in the second division.

Budgen at once submitted himself to custody and was taken to the cells. The charge against Budgen was that of knowingly receiving information communicated to him in contravention of the Official Secrets Act (1911).

Sir Thomas Inskip, K.C., the Attorney-General, explained that the Daily Mail had been in the habit of publishing advance information of wills obtained from Somerset House. It was discovered that the information had been communicated to Budgen by a civil servant named Ballard, who had been sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment, and had lost his position and prospects in the Civil Service.

It had been the practice of Ballard to leave information for Budgen at a restaurant in the Strand. The information was contained in a memorandum or a letter and enclosed in an envelope addressed to Mr. "Gaiety."

The Attorney-General said that while it was perfectly true that this information would not prejudice or imperil the State in any way, the gravity of the offence consisted of the way in which Budgen carried on the process of tampering with the official system and the corruption of civil servants.

Competitive System.

Sir William Jowitt, K.C., for the appellant, argued that the offence could have been met by a different class of punishment altogether. He complained that, although another charge of inciting was withdrawn at the Police Court, facts germane to that charge only were allowed to weigh at the Police Court and to be used as a yardstick by which the measure of punishment appropriate to the offence was fixed.

He also urged that the offence did not concern any sketch, plans, models, deeds or documents, the disclosure of which would be prejudicial or inimicable to the welfare of the State. The disclosure of these wills did not take place a long time before the official disclosure. As a matter of fact, they only appeared on the morning of the day on which they would be disclosed by Somerset House.

The fact is, said Sir William Jowitt, "that you get the information in the Daily Mail on your breakfast table in the morning and the official information could be published in the Evening Standard at lunch. That is the result of a competitive system of modern journalism to be first in the field. Whether it is a good or bad system, Budgen is a working reporter who is subject to that system as much as any of them. He has to justify himself to his newspaper, and the newspaper has to justify itself to the public in being up-to-date and first with the news. The reporter was suffering from nothing more than excessive zeal in order to get early news."

Good War Record.

Sir William also said that Budgen not only held a first-class war record, but was honorary social secretary of the Press Club. He joined the Army at the outbreak of war when only 15 years of age. He served throughout the war, was wounded twice, and was given his commission on the field. He was now suffering from a permanent shortened arm as the result of his war service. When he came out of the Army he had to find a means of livelihood, and became a working journalist in 1920. He was a married man with a child.

Counsel read a letter from Lord Riddell, president of the Press Club, paying a tribute to Mr. Budgen's character.

In refusing the appeal, the Chairman of the Sessions expressed his personal regret, but said he felt it a public duty to order that the sentence should be carried out.

SWEEP WINNER SUEED BY WIFE

Things All Right Until Money Came

A man who, it was stated, won £20,000 in the Grand National Irish Sweepstake this year, figured in a case heard at Chester Castle Petty Sessions.

He was George Herbert Cuffin, and his wife, Mary Ellen, brought a summons alleging that he neglected to maintain her and three children.

Mrs. Cuffin's address was given as Monastery Row, Ince, near Chester, and her husband's as Meadow Farm, Huntington, Chester.

Mr. W. F. Youde, for Mrs. Cuffin, said that when they were married in 1927 she was a widow with eight children.

The husband was one of those fortunate individuals who had won £20,000 in the Irish Sweep on the Grand National of 1932.

This had obviously affected his outlook on life, said Mr. Youde. Since that time he had been drinking heavily and had frequently ill-treated his wife, who complained that he had been associating with another woman.

Mr. Youde said that Cuffin now seemed to have extraordinary views regarding women, and told his wife that he could "get plenty of women at fourpence a dozen."

He had made no contributions to maintain his wife and family since June 22 last. On that day he came to the house, and at night there was a severe thunderstorm. Cuffin, who was the worse for drink, assaulted his wife and threatened to shoot her and to break her neck. As a consequence, his wife and three children had to leave the house.

"I Wish He Had Never Won It."

Mr. Youde then described an incident alleged to have occurred when Mrs. Cuffin went to see a house her husband was building in Green Lane, Chester. She went with a daughter, and Cuffin ordered her off the ground and threw the daughter's bicycle out of the field.

Mrs. Cuffin, in evidence, said, "I know this. There was more comfort without the money than with it. I wish he had never won it."

Mr. J. A. Behn (defending)—Did you tell your husband, "I am not going to work. I am going to be a lady?"—No.

What have you done with the £200 he gave you?—I have spent it on clothes that he has damaged.

I suggest that he allowed you £10 a week?—No, sir. It was £5.

Mrs. Cuffin said that her husband gave one of his sons £10,000 and a daughter £1,000.

Mr. Behn—You have not told the Bench that he gave one of your daughters a wedding present of £450.

Jessie Randles, one of Mrs. Cuffin's daughters, was called to the witness-box, but she collapsed, and the Magistrates decided to dispense with her evidence.

Husband's Story.

Cuffin, in evidence, said that at his marriage he was a widower with three grown-up children. They were living quite happily until the money came. He then allowed his wife £10 a week, and gave her £200 to invest.

Mr. Behn—Why did you leave home?

Witness—Because she had a house full of daughters, and they would not work.

They wanted you to keep them?—Yes.

Cuffin said that he offered them £1 a week each to pick gooseberries, but they would not accept it. The whole of the trouble was caused by the interference of Mrs. Cuffin's grown-up daughters.

Cuffin denied the allegations that he threatened to shoot or hurt his wife, and that he had said he could get women "at fourpence a dozen." He was quite prepared to have his wife and the three younger children home.

He also denied assaulting his wife at Green Lane, Chester.

The Bench made an order of £2 a week in respect of the wife and 10s. each in respect of the three children.

Meuse to Nieupoort. Their next goal will be Antwerp. Ostend, Dunkirk to Calais. Here they embark on a channel steamer for Dover. They put out to sea, hugging the coast to Margate and Sheerness. Then to London, Reading and Windsor.

VENUE PROBLEM

(By "Veritas")

Glad news has been received by the Hongkong Boxing Association. A. B. Flaggott, whose weight out here is as yet unknown, is coming to join the China Fleet and according to Jim Cartledge is good enough to beat anybody at his weight in the Far East.

This should act as a much-wanted stimulant to the Association who are faced with the unhappy problem of as yet having no venues in which to stage their events this winter.

Anyhow the Association is making all preparations for the forthcoming season, and will be in the fortunate position of staging not only popular A. B. Ewin, but also Pete Judge, who recently fought a magnificent draw with Joe Beckett the U.S. Marines "champ" in Shanghai.

Ewin's record in Hongkong is an impressive one and his appearance on the resin is always a splendid attraction. He has held not only the middleweight title, but the welterweight championship, and reports indicate that he is in fine fighting trim in readiness for this winter's engagements.

The Association are facing the problem of having no City Hall at their disposal for the staging of the events. It is quite on the cards that the Lee Theatre will be secured, whilst there is a suggestion that attempts be made to obtain the use of the V.R.C. bath. If the latter course be adopted and the promoters successful in their endeavour, it will mean open-air tournaments which must of necessity be something of a drawback in that they will be dependent on the weather.

HOLE-IN-ONE

HAVERS DOES IT AGAIN

Arthur Havers, of Sandy Lodge, can claim a place among those who make a habit of holding tee shots. He has just accomplished his sixth hole in one. This was at the eighteenth hole on his home course—the hole that strikes terror into the novice because of the towering bunker which almost obliterates the daylight, just in front of the tee.

Havers has holed out in one at the first hole at Royal Norwich, the fourteenth hole at Prince's (Sandwich), the seventeenth at Coombe Hill, the third at Frinton, and the sixth at Hekeeth.

Of these, the holing of the fourteenth at Prince's (Sandwich) was undoubtedly the best. He played a full cleek shot against a strong wind on that occasion.

Arrangements have been made for the annual reunion of golfing members of the Kowloon Cricket Club, which will take place at Kowloon Golf Club, by permission of the Kowloon Golf Club, on Sunday, 25th September.

Members of the Kowloon Golf Club are requested to note that starting times have been reserved for this match from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The Mead Shield will be competed for on Monday, September 18th. This shield was first put up for competition when the Kowloon Cricket Club had a golfing section and shared the King's Park course with the United Services Recreation Club and the Bowling Green Club. When the King's Park was taken over by the Government, the Kowloon Golf Club was formed and a course developed at Kowloon City. In the formation of the Kowloon Golf Club the three Clubs already mentioned played a prominent part, and each year the Kowloon Golf Club grants the use of its course for the annual reunion of K.C.C. golfers, many of whom are among the founders of the Club.

Members of the Kowloon Cricket Club who wish to participate are requested to sign the list which has been posted at the K.C.C. Club House or to send their names (together with handicap, if any) to the Special Secretary, Mr. J. B. Price, at the Club House, 10, Queen's Road, Central.

RECREIO WELL

In view of the fact that they turned out a weak team, whilst the Recreio were strongly represented, the Y.M.C.A. second eleven did well in a friendly hockey match against the Portuguese yesterday.

The Recreio won 3-1, but their first goal was scored when the "Y" were without a custodian, whilst a weakness in the middle line afforded the "Rees" plenty of attacking opportunities.

On the whole the exchanges were even and well contested. Owen played splendidly at right half for the losers, whilst Burnett, in addition to scoring the "Y's" only goal after a brilliant run, was a constant source of danger to the Recreio defence, and with a bit of luck would have netted on more occasions.

The Recreio revealed balance and did not have a really weak spot in the team.

SCHOOLBOY'S BOWLING FEAT AT LORDS

Taunton School Student
Takes 12 for 72

London, Sept. 2.

J. H. Cameron of Taunton School, playing at Lords for "The Rest" against the Lord's Schools, took all ten wickets for 49 runs.

In the second innings, he took the only two wickets that fell for 23 runs. The feat was thus the remarkable one of 12 wickets in succession for 72 runs.

16 YEARS OLD.

Cameron is 16 years of age. He was born in Jamaica. His father, Dr. J. Cameron, toured England with the West Indies team in 1906. He used to play with W. G. Grace.

When young Cameron came to school in Somerset he was a batsman, coached by his father. He learned to bowl in England and was taught by Mr. A. G. Marshall, the Somerset player, to bowl slow leg breaks.

Cameron's action and technique are excellent. He can make the ball turn fast and he can bowl the googly well.

OFFER MADE.

Somerset have approached him about playing for the County. "I am not sure about taking up cricket seriously," he declared. Cameron, however, is to go to Oxford from Taunton, and there he may find that serious cricket has attractions for him.

Somerset moreover are not likely to let so promising a young player escape them. Googly bowlers are too rare for that.

Lacey and Allis were leading with scores of 141 at the end of the second round, and after three rounds Allis was three strokes in front of Boyer (211 against 214), with Cotton and Lacey a stroke further behind.

to honour in a sense of justice international good will and friendship, to take over existing obligations and to respect the principle of the Open Door and equal opportunity—domestic and foreign policies which are all very fair and aboveboard. On March 10 the Manchukuo Government sent a communication to Japan and on the 16th to other countries in which they repeated the above programme and requested them to establish normal diplomatic relations with Manchukuo.

"With serious concern and minute attention the Imperial Japanese Government have closely followed the development of conditions in Manchukuo during the last half year, and have come to recognize that Manchukuo's sincerity and determination to carry out the above policies can be relied upon.

"For instance, Manchukuo has established a special committee in order to prepare for the abolition of Extraterritoriality, opening up of the interior to all foreigners and other treaty revisions; and in this regard its attitude, directed as it has been towards the attainment of desired revision through agreement with the Powers concerned, and without resorting to any unilateral measure of termination, has been particularly notable.

"Measures which have been for the reform of financial and other systems have also obtained appreciable results. Thus Manchukuo is now steadily developing into full maturity as an independent state, and is assured of a future full of promise.

"In consideration of the attitude of Manchukuo to the domestic and foreign problems above referred to, and of Japan's interest in Manchuria as a region of vital importance of her national defence and the existence of her people, the Imperial Japanese Government have to secure tranquility in this region as soon as possible and to guarantee for all time to come the foundations of security of her Empire and the peace of the Far East. With these purposes in view Government instructed General Muto, His Majesty's Ambassador, to sign on this date a protocol recording the agreement concluded with the Manchukuo authorities, and thus accorded formal recognition to that country.

"That Japan's action in this connexion is not derogatory to any treaty to which they are party has been made clear in the address of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, made in the Imperial Diet on August 25.

"The Protocol confirms the fact that Manchukuo is an independent State organized in accordance with the free will of its inhabitants, and it stipulates that all rights and interests which Japan and her subjects possess within the territory of Manchukuo by virtue of treaties and other agreements are to be confirmed and respected, thus doing away once and for all with all pending disputes concerning these rights and interests.

"Recognizing the fact that any menace to Manchuria constitutes at the same time a threat to the safety and existence of the Empire, the Protocol further provides that Japan and Manchukuo are to co-operate in the maintenance of their nationals' security and that the Japanese forces necessary for this purpose are to be stationed in Manchukuo.

"It is the object of the Protocol thus to establish a perpetual relationship of good neighbourliness between the two countries and to secure the peace of the Far East.

"On several occasions the Japanese Government have declared that they have no territorial designs in Manchuria, and the preamble of the Protocol reaffirms that both contracting Powers will mutually respect each other's territorial rights.

"As regards the economic activities of foreigners, the Manchukuo Government made clear in their communication of March 10 above alluded to that they would observe the principle of the Open Door.

"What Japan desires in Manchuria is to do away with all anti-foreign policies there so that the region may become a safe place of abode for natives and foreigners alike, while at the same time guaranteeing her legitimate rights and interests there; and therefore it is hardly necessary to repeat the assurance that Japan sincerely hopes that all peoples of the world will pursue their economic activities in Manchuria on a footing of equal opportunity and will thereby contribute to the development and prosperity of that region.

"It is safely retrospected that the world will come to have ever-increasing understanding of and confidence in the sincerity and and earnest effort of Manchukuo to carry out its foreign and domestic policy, and that the Powers will make no long delay in establishing diplomatic relations with it.

"In according formal recognition to Manchukuo, the Japanese Government desire to express hearty wishes for the future of the country and the fervent hope that our people will spare no effort in fulfilling the duty of a friendly neighbour, so that the two countries may live and flourish together in common prosperity."

No Conference Demand.

Shanghai, Sept. 15.

The Finance Minister, Mr. T. V. Soong, interviewed by Reuters today declared China had decided not to demand a Nine Power Conference.—Reuters.

Trade Union Protest

Shanghai, Sept. 15.

Various trade unions in Shanghai have addressed a joint telegram to the Nanking Government urging it to recall Chinese diplomatic and consular officials from Japan in view of Japan's formal recognition of Manchukuo. The telegram points out that under present circumstances there is no more friendship between China and Japan and there can be no further diplomatic dealings between the two countries.

They also urge the Government not to enter into diplomatic negotiations with the Japanese Minister to China, giving him only such treatment as is due a foreign diplomatic representative.—Reuters Special.

London Anxiety

London, Sept. 15.

Acute anxiety has been created in diplomatic and well-informed quarters by the announcement of the Japanese recognition of Manchukuo. The text of the note has not yet been published, but the effects of the recognition, which have been seriously debated during the past month, have been largely discounted. The decision does not come as a surprise.

The gravity in the Far East is everywhere recognised. The New York Chronicle says the position, from the viewpoint of international morality, could not be worse and refers to the "deplorable rule's progress," of British policy, which afforded "encouragement to the Japanese militarism to go from strength to strength until now the Japanese proclaim defiantly that as far as they are concerned, the League of Nations, America and the Lytton Report can all go to a hotter place than Jericho."

The paper predicts gloomy prospects for the world "as long as Japanese imperialism is undefeated" and says that as a settlement cannot be accomplished by mediation or conciliation, the task is to help Chinese nationalism to defeat Japanese imperialism.—Reuters.

Italy Neutral

Rome, Sept. 15.

There has been no surprise in Italy as the Japanese recognition of Manchukuo was expected. The average Italian regards the recognition as the inevitable result of the pressure of economic forces driving Japan to seek stable markets for the expansion of her trade and population. Italians are inclined to sympathize, considering that Japan, like Fascist Italy, must find outlets. To oppose the Japanese penetration of a country which is under population and under developed would be hypocrisy in Italian eyes, even running counter to the Fascist theories of developing the natural wealth of a country.

No Official Comment.

Official quarters decline to comment until they have further details. A prominent official declared "Our main concern is to maintain peace, to avoid a new armaments race, and to preserve markets for Italian trade in the Far East. Italy is quite neutral."

The situation is being watched with the closest attention, because of the League repercussions. It is realized that the future of the League may depend on its handling of the Manchurian problem.—Reuters.

In America

Washington, Sept. 15.

That Japan's recognition of Manchukuo will not precipitate a new move until the Lytton report is considered, is the opinion gathered from the State Department by the correspondent of the New York Times. Any representations by the United States consul at Harbin for increased protection against brigandage would not constitute recognition of the new state, even by implication.

If China seeks to invoke the Nine Power Pact, the State Department will not act until the Lytton Report is published, or perhaps not even until the League of Nations has acted upon it.—Press

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

alarm. "I should have reminded him!" she told herself. "I should have telephoned."

Still she would not give up hope that Dan would come.

It was 20 minutes after 1—almost an hour past the time she and Dan were to meet.

Cherry raised one hand and brushed the mist from her eyes. No use to wait longer. No use to hope against hope that the next moment would bring him.

He wasn't coming. He had forgotten about her!

Suddenly Cherry felt a hand on her arm. She whirled, her face lighting with happiness. "Oh—!" she exclaimed and her lips moved to form Dan's name.

But it wasn't Dan Phillips who smiled down at her. Max Pearson stood there. He said calmly, "Hello, stranger. Where've you been keeping yourself?"

Cherry's reply was a confused murmur. She heard Pearson speak again, without knowing what the words were. She heard him say something about lunch and was surprised to find herself walking down the street beside him, entering the dining room of the Hotel Wellington.

They sat at a small table. Cherry turned her head and suddenly her eyes focused on a figure across the room. For a moment the figure blurred and the room swam before her. Then the outlines steadied themselves. It was—oh, it WAS!

Dan was sitting at a table not a dozen yards away, leaning forward in earnest conversation, and the woman facing him was Brenda Vail.

had been a substantial increase in membership, and these new members should be encouraged to come forward and give the old committees the benefit of their fresh ideas. He appealed for all possible support in carrying through the winter programme.

The following committees were elected: Social—Messrs. Dormer, Graham, True, Ferguson, Jeffries, Gray and Bates.

Billiards—Messrs. Lewis, Tate, Richards and Thompson.

Literary and Debating—Dr. Allen, Messrs. P. S. Cassidy, Crozier, Ferguson, Gray, Dinsdale and Skinner.

A. D. C.—Messrs. Cornelius, Luke, Whitta, Bates, Sweet and Grenham.

Golf—Messrs. Russell, Milne, Hampton and Martin.

Camera—Messrs. Grenham, Dargfield, Stockton and Bergaust.

Library—Messrs. E. R. Price, Davies, Crozier, Marshall, Grant, Jeffries and Dr. Allen.

Swimming—Messrs. Railton, Harvey, Garrod and Brokenshire.

General Sports committees—Messrs. Gray, Fowler, Harvey, McLellan, Wright, Owen and T. Ingram.

The secretaries will be ex officio members of each committee.

Mr. A. W. Ingram referred briefly to the work done for the Service men in Hongkong, and paid a tribute to the manner in which members had supported the functions arranged for them.

With the early return of the Navy, more functions would be held, and he expressed the hope that the same support, both in attendance and in the presentation of trophies would be forthcoming.

HOTEL TRAGEDY

INQUEST HELD IN KOWLOON YESTERDAY

The tragedy at the Trocadero Hotel, Kowloon, on August 4, when Mr. John Kanis, an agent of the Commercial and Credit Information Bureau, was found dead in the bath-room with the gas turned on, had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistrate's court yesterday afternoon when Mr. Fraser, sitting as Coroner, conducted an inquiry into the circumstances attending his death.

The deceased, the Coroner said, was of Dutch descent, and had been married several weeks before his death. He lived with his wife at Lock Road, a little distance away from the Trocadero Hotel.

Mrs. Kanis was not in the Colony at present, but her statement had already been taken. In her statement, she said she met deceased in Shanghai and married him in Hongkong. They lived quite happily until August 3, when he said he was going to a party at the Peak and asked her not to expect him back for the night.

The next morning she was informed that her husband was dead. After her husband's death, she discovered that he was in financial difficulties. He left a letter asking her to forgive him.

Medical evidence confirmed that deceased died of coal gas poisoning.

Police Evidence.

Evidence was given by Inspector Lane of being summoned to the Trocadero Hotel on the morning of August 4 and of finding deceased dead in the bath-room. The gas had been turned full on, and all the little openings in the bath-room had been stuffed with paper. Lying on the floor of the bath-room, the Police found P. G. Wodehouse's famous comedy, "The Man Upstairs."

Several letters were later found, one to his wife, one to Mr. Lowe, the proprietor of the Hotel, and three to various people.

Opening some of the letters, the Coroner said they revealed that there seemed to have been some misunderstanding between the deceased and his employers, whom he accused of deception. Deceased appeared to be under the impression that he had not been fairly dealt with.

Mr. F. Lowe, of the Trocadero Hotel, deposed to seeing deceased, who engaged Room No. 17 on August 3.

Mr. H. O. Davies, a clerk in the Government service, said he was a resident at the Hotel on August 3.

He occupied Room No. 16 and about 11.30 p.m. he heard someone in Room No. 17. Later he heard somebody walking on the verandah. He fell asleep between 2 and 2.30 a.m. and woke up at 6.30 a.m. He went to his bath-room and came out about 7.15 a.m. At that time there was a strong smell of gas, but he did not know where it came from. He told his boy about it, but the latter did not make inquiries. He eventually traced the smell to another bath-room, which he found to be closed. He knocked at the door, but receiving no response, pushed it open. He then saw the back of a man's head lying in the basin. He informed Mr. Lowe, who in turn informed the Police.

Referring to the case as a very determined attempt to commit

OBITUARY

DEATH OF WORLD-FAMOUS GYNAECOLOGIST

London, Sept. 15.

One of the world's leading gynaecologists, Sir Henry Simson, is dead in London. Sir Henry attended the birth of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret. He married an actress, Miss Lena Ashwell, and closely associated himself with theatrical productions.—Reuter's Special.

Sir Henry John Forbes Simson, the eminent British surgeon, was born at Bareilly, India, in 1872. His father was a member of the Bengal Civil Service. Sir Henry Simson was, however, sent home to Edinburgh for education and took the M.B. and C.M. degrees at the university. After holding posts in some of the chief hospitals of the Scottish capital he travelled abroad for about a year to gain wider experience, making his longest stay in Egypt. He then started practice in London. Specialising in obstetrics, he was appointed surgeon to the Hospital for Women and the West London Hospital and was also made examiner in obstetrics to the Conjoint Board, London, and the University of Leeds. In 1908 he married.

The Bedside Manner.

Sir Henry Simson's professional manner was particularly happy and even his colleagues were sometimes surprised at the ease and rapidity with which he gained the confidence of patients. A tall, slim, clean-shaven man of distinguished appearance and with smiling eyes, he seemed to dissipate dread by his mere approach. He was probably the only eminent doctor who had preached in a London church. One afternoon he found awaiting him a letter from "Dick" Sheppard, the suicide, Coroner said deceased had obviously made a plan beforehand. It was very doubtful whether deceased was in a normal state of mind, and he (the Coroner) thought he was justified in assuming that the deceased was not. He would therefore return a verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind."

famous vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, inviting him to address the congregation. "Come in your ordinary kit," the letter ran, "and don't let the fact that you are in a church cramp your style." Going at once in his "ordinary kit," he ascended the pulpit and delivered an eloquent address, concluding with an appeal for London's hospitals. When in Aug. 1930, the Duchess of York gave birth to her second daughter, Simson was her chief medical attendant. Whether he was responsible for the composition of the bulletin announcing the happy event is not known, but it contained a homely Scottish phrase, appropriate to the Duchess's nationality which he might have written. It delighted every one by announcing that the little girl was "doing nicely."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

I believe that one of the most common faults of even the average bridge player is that he does not know when to sacrifice a trick. Quite often it is necessary to give up one or even two tricks in order to make a trick for yourself.

In the following hand, the declarer should not try to take the finesse as it will do him no good—he still must lose a trick in the club suit, therefore he should lose it immediately and not sacrifice an entry.

The Bidding.

The contract bidding would be South one club, West pass, North one heart. South would then bid one spade. Here we have two one over one bids—each forcing. North should then bid two no trump because he has the diamond suit stopped. South would then take the contract to three no trump.

The Play.

It would be East's opening lead and his proper play would be the four of diamonds as it is his longest and strongest suit, and in addition it is the only suit that was not bid by the opposition. The jack should be played from dummy, West winning with the ace.

West should not make the mistake of returning a small diamond but should return the nine of diamonds so as not to block the hand off—the three spot will allow him to go through the North hand. The nine of diamonds will be won with dummy's king.

Some players would now make the mistake of leading a heart to declarer's ace so as to take the club finesse, but you can see that regardless of the distribution a club trick must be lost, therefore the proper play is to lose it immediately and the five of clubs should be played from dummy.

West should go up with the nine in an endeavor to hold the trick so that he can come through the diamonds, but North would play the jack and East would win the trick with the king.

East had now better cash his queen of diamonds or he will lose it, and the declarer wins the remaining tricks, making four no trump.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

By Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Cherry Dixon, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, married Dan Phillips, newspaper reporter, after a quarrel with her parents. It is a Leap Year marriage and Cherry does the proposing.

She and Dan move into a cheap apartment and Cherry's first struggles with housework are disastrous. Dick Shannon, movie critic of the News, is friendly. Cherry meets handsome Max Peterson, also of the News, who tries to make love to her. After several weeks Cherry's mother becomes seriously ill. The girl goes home and there is a reconciliation with her parents. Dick will not allow her to accept Shannon's aid from them however. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon depart, seeking another climate to improve the mother's health.

Brenda Vall, magazine writer, comes to Wellington and Dan meets her. She asks him to collaborate in writing a play. Dan begins to spend most of the evenings at Mrs. Vall's apartment. Dick tries to warn Cherry that there is gossip about Dan and Brenda but Cherry will not listen.

After a day of housecleaning when Cherry is tired and nervous she and Dan quarrel. He goes to see Brenda who leads him to believe she is in love with him.

CHAPTER XLII.

Cherry sat in the window seat and looked out at the only tree in sight. Some of its leaves had blown to the ground but those that remained were bright yellow. They danced in the sunlight, the very emblem of carefree gaiety.

Cherry did not even see the dancing leaves though she was staring at them. There were tiny vertical lines between Cherry's brown eyes. The eyes were brooding and serious now. Cherry's lips pressed together in an anxious line. She was struggling with the most difficult problem she had ever faced.

The situation was terrifying. She had felt it daily for the past week. The thing that frightened her was nothing you could put your finger on and say, "This is wrong. We'll correct it." It was something intangible. Something Cherry was powerless to combat because she could not even name it.

In some way a barrier had risen between herself and Dan. She no more quarrelling between them. Ever since the night of the argument about the house cleaning Dan had been meticulously polite. He left the house early each morning and usually arrived late at night. When he came home for dinner he departed almost immediately. Cherry was too proud to inquire how he was spending his time.

She went about the housework, cooked the food he liked, made herself attractive for the hour when he arrived—and would have died rather than let him know how she was suffering.

It had been five days now since the dreadful night.

"It was my fault—partly," Cherry told herself for the thousandth time. "I shouldn't have let myself get so tired and nervous and I shouldn't have complained about the work."

But there was the matter of pride, too. If Dan had made the slightest move toward reconciliation Cherry would have met the venture halfway. He hadn't—and therefore affairs were as they stood.

Suddenly Cherry got to her feet. "This won't do!" she scolded. "There's no use sitting here worrying. I'm a little fool to imagine a lot of things that aren't true. Probably that's the whole trouble—I've been letting my imagination get the best of me. Now I'm going to quit it!"

For the rest of that day she was determinedly cheerful. It was not easy but when doubts arose Cherry closed her mind to them. Moreover she outlined a course of action. Something was to happen within two days that she felt sure would restore her happiness.

"I won't tell Dan!" she thought. "I'll surprise him."

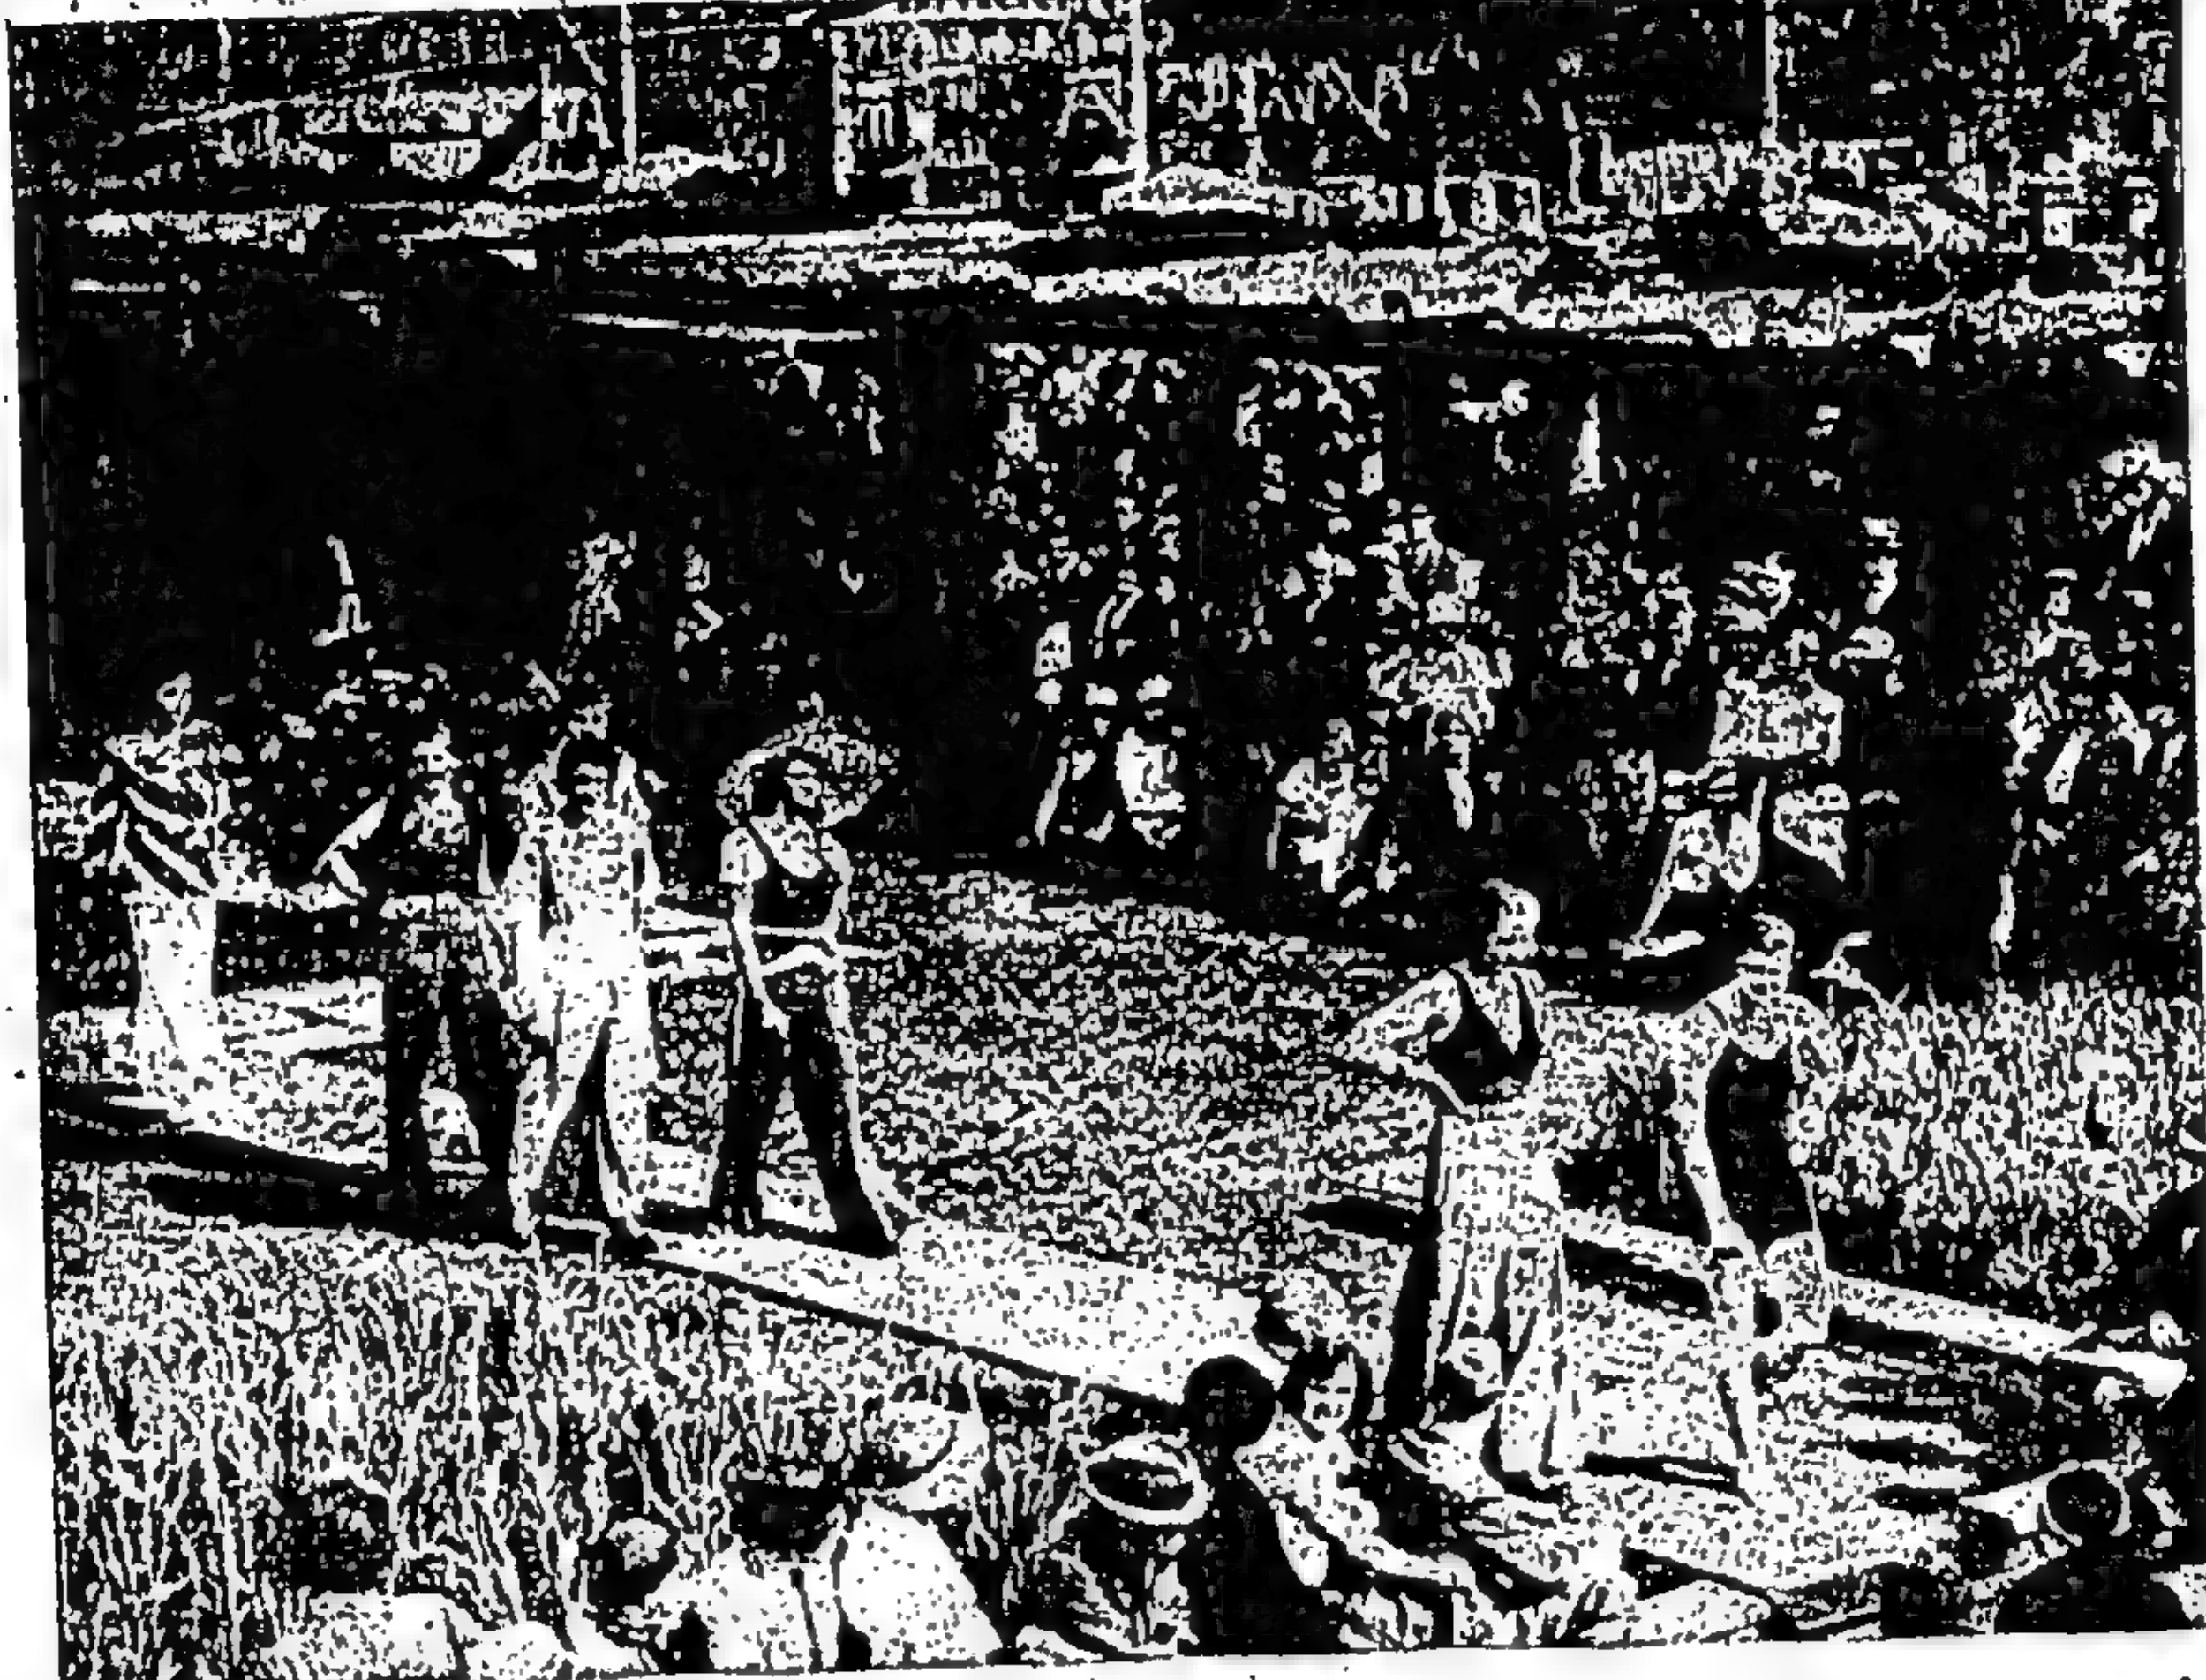

Photo shows the latest London innovation, a bathing beach parade in the heart of London. It was taken on the roof garden of a fashionable dressmaker's in the West End recently.

down about 12:30 and have lunch with you. Will that be all right?"

Dan did not glance up from the newspaper beside his plate. He said, "Yes, I guess so."

"I'll meet you in front of the library," Cherry promised. "I'll be there at 12:30."

The young man nodded agreement. He did not leave the apartment as usual after dinner but flung himself down on the davenport with a new book. Cherry felt this was encouraging. She was happy as she went about clearing the dishes from the table. She washed them and put them away, taking care to be quiet so as not to disturb Dan.

"Everything's going to be all right," she assured herself. "I'm sure of it!"

But there was disappointment ahead. Dan did not come home for dinner the following evening. Cherry would not let this make her downcast, however. She was planning her faith on her plans for Saturday.

She intended to remind Dan in the morning that she was to meet him at noon. She meant to speak of it the last thing before he left the apartment but somehow he was gone before she realized it.

At 11 o'clock she telephoned the office but Dan was not there.

"It doesn't matter," Cherry assured herself. "Dan never forgets anything." It was true that his memory was unusual.

While she dressed she planned how to break the news. They would go to Stanley's for lunch. It wasn't terrifically expensive and besides this was a special occasion. While Dan was reading the menu she would say, "I'd like that special ice cream for dessert—Stanley's special they call it. It's appropriate to-day."

Dan would be sure to ask what she meant and then Cherry would say, "Why, dear have you forgotten? It's our anniversary. We've been married six months to-day!" That was the surprise she had in store. The anniversary was ex-

Chicago police held Dr. William A. O'Brien, 41, for further investigation into the supposed suicide of his wife, Mrs. Vera O'Brien, 24, after tests with a lie detector brought the admission from the radiologist he had lied in some particulars in his first story to police. of sacrificing his pride. They would recall memories together. He would tell her how happy he had been during those six months and what a wonderful wife she had been. Oh, yes, everything would be as Cherry had planned! They could spend the afternoon and evening together. They could forget the rest of the world. There would only be she and Dan! Reconciliation would be all the sweeter after the bitter loneliness. Cherry's thoughts drifted. The important thing was to let Dan know she wasn't angry with him. To give him a chance to tell her he had been miserable these last few days as she had been.

She bathed and patted on the delicately scented bath powder that was her dearest luxury. She got into brief, lacy undergarments, new hose and her best pumps. As she touched her cheeks with the pink pad from her rouge box Cherry was as careful as she had ever been when dressing for an engagement with Dan before their marriage. She made her mouth into a vivid rosebud with lipstick.

She put on a brown frock, adjusted the little hat smartly and slipped into her polo coat. A bright scarf relieved the sombre monotone. Cherry took a last glance into the mirror. Her eyes glowed with anticipation. Yes, she was satisfied with her appearance. If she met anyone she knew at Stanley's she need not feel ashamed.

The ride down town on the trolley required only 15 minutes but Cherry allowed herself more than that. She left the house promptly at 12 o'clock and 20 minutes later had reached the library. Naturally Dan was not in sight. He would probably be late.

Cherry walked leisurely along the block. The day was colder than she had realized and she pulled the collar of her coat anxiously about her throat. A woman wearing a handsome mink wrap passed and Cherry thought ruefully of the beaver coat that had been a gift on her last birthday. The coat was in storage and if Mrs. Dixon had been at home she would probably have insisted on Cherry wearing it. Cherry promptly forgot about the fur coat. Two young

INQUEST HELD IN KOWLOON YESTERDAY

The tragedy at the Trocadero Hotel, Kowloon, on August 4, when Mr. John Kanis, an agent of the Commercial and Credit Information Bureau, was found dead in the bath-room with the gas turned on, had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon when Mr. Fraser, sitting as Coroner, conducted an inquiry into the circumstances attending his death.

The deceased, the Coroner said, was of Dutch descent, and had been married several weeks before his death. He lived with his wife at Lock Road, a little distance away from the Trocadero Hotel.

Mrs. Kanis was not in the Colony at present, but her statement had already been taken. In her statement, she said she met deceased in Shanghai and married him in Hongkong. They lived quite happily until August 3, when he said he was going to a party at the Peak and asked her not to expect him back for the night.

The next morning she was informed that her husband was dead. After her husband's death, she discovered that he was in financial difficulties. He left a letter asking her to forgive him.

Medical evidence confirmed that deceased died of coal gas poisoning.

Police Evidence.

Evidence was given by Inspector Lane of being summoned to the Trocadero Hotel on the morning of August 4 and of finding deceased dead in the bath-room. The gas had been turned full on, and all the little openings in the bath-room had been stuffed with paper.

Lying on the floor of the bath-room, the Police found P. G. Wodehouse's famous comedy, "The Man Upstairs."

Several letters were later found, one to his wife, one to Mr. Lowe, the proprietor of the Hotel, and three to various people.

Opening some of the letters, the Coroner said they revealed that there seemed to have been some misunderstanding between the deceased and his employers, whom he accused of deception. Deceased appeared to be under the impression that he had not been fairly dealt with.

Mr. F. Lowe, of the Trocadero Hotel, deposed to seeing deceased, who engaged Room No. 17 on August 3.

Mr. H. O. Davies, a clerk in the Government service, said he was a resident at the Hotel on August 3. He occupied Room No. 16 and about 11.30 p.m. he heard someone in Room No. 17. Later he heard somebody walking on the verandah. He fell asleep between 2 and 2.30 a.m. and woke up at 6.30 a.m. He went to his bath-room and came out about 7.15 a.m. At that time there was a strong smell of gas, but he did not know where it came from. He told his boy about it, but the latter did not make inquiries. He eventually traced the smell to another bath-room, which he found to be closed. He knocked at the door, but receiving no response, pushed it open. He then saw the back of a man's head lying in the basin. He informed Mr. Lowe, who in turn informed the Police.

Referring to the case as a very determined attempt to commit suicide, Coroner said deceased had obviously made a plan beforehand. It was very doubtful whether deceased was in a normal state of mind, and he (the Coroner) thought he was justified in assuming that the deceased was not. He would therefore return a verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind."

CINEMA "SHOTS" AND "SEQUENCES"

"BUT THE FLESH IS WEAK"—Inimitable Robert Montgomery gives another very convincing and charming performance in this latest picture of his which comes to the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. Starred with him is Nora Gregor a newcomer to the American screen, who scores a brilliant success. Witty and sophisticated, the film is in adaptation of Ivor Novello's play "The Truth Game".

BUCHANAN OBLITERATED BY MOTHER-LOVE SEQUENCES

"MAN OF MAYFAIR" SPOILT BY BAD DIRECTING

FILM OF LOST POSSIBILITIES

providing the required stimulus for full appreciation of the subsequent scenes and studies. His use of sound effects in the early sequences demonstrated once again what a perfect medium of expression they can be—much more perfect than spoken lines. Used in their correct form they possess a wealth of detail which spoken dialogue, unless given the perfect expression on the part of the speaker, can never give. Of the players, there is little need to say anything. Charles Ruggles and Roland Young were given studies which allowed them full scope for their talents, whilst Lily Damita was delightful. From every viewpoint the picture was a remarkably fine achievement and goes along way in raising the prestige of Hollywood.

tor is so intent upon "putting across" the mother-love interest (it starts in a Mayfair drawing room and works up to a terrific crescendo in a village tea house), that Jack Buchanan, complete with song, voice, and dance, lips that form one of the most appealing smiles on the screen, and a couple of interesting situations, is completely lost.

POOR TECHNIQUE.

UNFORTUNATELY, the defects in story presentation and character studies are not relieved by good cinema technique. Twice bad cutting ruins two scenes, and although at the opening there is an attempt to infuse a rhythm in the cutting, it is lost in the succeeding sequences which are drawn out to insufferable lengths. One feels the need of Frank Tuttle's hand with his extraordinary creation of atmosphere in

EPIGRAMMATICAL ROBERT.

IT looks as though Robert Montgomery, having discovered his niche as a purveyor of sophisticated wit and epigrammatic dialogue, is doomed forever to bear the burden of his load. He is given a typical part in the latest picture of his to come, Hongkong, But the Flesh is Weak, which opens a season at the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. He talks his way out of delicate and indelicate situations, throws in his disarming smile here and there, and generally speaking gives a performance guaranteed to amuse the men and captivate the women. The picture is the screen version of Ivor Novello's stage play The Truth Game, the story of which gives a somewhat false impression of the British aristocracy. Many will declare that the new screen find, Nora Gregor, captures the honours, whereas Montgomery's admirers will probably claim that it is his greatest work to date. In many respects it compares very favourably with Private Lives, though the situations are not handled with quite the same effect. The entertainment value of the picture, that is of the transient type, cannot be denied. It offers a splendid way of passing an idle hour.

JACKIE'S HISTORICS.

THE past week also presented us with another opportunity of viewing the histrionics of the latest Hollywood prodigy, Jackie Cooper, in When a Feller Needs a Friend, at the Queen's. Unlike Mr. Crommies' infant prodigy, there is no deception about the age of the child actors from Hollywood, and they come and go in a never-ending stream, portraying the whole gamut

THE CINEMAS TO-DAY

King's "Careless Lady."
Queen's "Night Court."
Central "Caught Cheating."
Majestic "Dracula."
Oriental "Wings."
Garden "Fifty Fathoms Deep."

This is the Night. Photography can be marked down as good, but the sound is a most uncertain factor and numbers of lines are lost through failing, whilst in the opening scene, the very heavy work of the orchestra is far too amplified, drowning the actors' dialogue and creating an annoying distraction. The picture comes to the King's Theatre on Sunday next. You will certainly find it entertaining, and had it been directed by Lubitsch, would undoubtedly have been a really fine picture. See it, anyhow.

INGENIOUS TUTTLE.

OF an entirely different calibre was This is the Night, which held sway at the King's during the first part of this week. In many respects a film of outstanding merit, it boasted, apart from the interesting study it made in cinema technique, the achievement of being really entertaining and amusing. Frank Tuttle, its efficient and not unimaginative director, is obviously a disciple of Lubitsch, and furthermore this film proves that he definitely has a flair for the same type of material as that so successfully exploited by the inimitable German producer. But This is the Night was the first outstanding picture made by Tuttle. His early work such as Love Among the Millionaires, Sweetie, and others, which have been seen in Hongkong, were very ordinary in type and could not be regarded as serious attempts to express modern cinematic art.

CLEVER SOUND EFFECTS.

WHERE Tuttle scored such a success in This is the Night was his quick recognition of the necessity of creating an atmosphere and rhythm by short sharp shots and the ingenious use of sound. In this respect he borrowed some of Chaplin's ideas as expressed in City Lights, and we saw the same principle applied, with equal success in Sunshine Sue. It threw the audience into a spirit of gaiety

EQUALITY IN ARMS

The German claim to equality in armaments with France raises an issue of vital importance, not only to these two nations, but to Europe generally. French rejection of the demand has moved Britain to take an interest in the subject, with the prospect of consultations between the Powers principally concerned. It is early in the day as yet to judge whether Britain's mediation will produce useful results, but it is at least reassuring to feel that some effort is to be made to work on an agreed basis on this problem, which has long been the subject of much heart-burning in Berlin. The chief necessity, of course, is to eliminate any latent feelings of distrust between the principal European nations.

The French attitude on armaments is, as we know, dominated by considerations of "security." Quite recently, on the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, M. Herriot declared that a heartfelt desire for peace had inspired all her actions, but the keynote of the occasion for the French people was said to be one of "Remember." Some time prior to this, President Lebrun, after stressing that France wished peace, added "But let no-one ask her to abandon her concern for security, so long as the spirit of peace does not reign everywhere." Turning to Germany, it is pertinent to point out that General von Schleicher, Minister of Defence, after calling attention to the fact that the French military budget is four times as large as Germany's, recently declared that "either the disarmament provisions of the Treaty of Versailles must be applied to all the Powers, or the right to rebuild her system of defence and make it equal to the needs of national security must be typical utterances serve to show that what one nation may see as "security," its neighbour may regard as insecurity to itself. To take the present instance, there is not only French security; there is, as one writer has pointed out, likewise "Sicherheit," and every other nation can translate security into its own terms. Even so, none by its own estimate of necessary arms would achieve security. And so the process can go on, with no finality in view. To again quote from a recent comment, "Germany may interpret Sicherheit as an equality with French armaments and insist that the Council of the League of Nations remove the restrictions placed upon her at Versailles. And should Germany build up to the present French strength, France would have to increase her military power four times to retain her relative position. Thus the attempt to obtain security by arms leads to rival attempts which destroy security."

How can real security be achieved? Assuredly not by encouraging the spirit of competition in armaments. Rather is it to be found by the directly opposite process. It has been said, with some measure of truth, that the most secure nations in Europe to-day are probably those with the smallest armaments. There must be co-operative effort, based on a sincere desire to peace and ruling out mutual suspicion, if the desired end is to be attained. Hitherto, quite apart from the German claim, much difficulty has been encountered in seeking to arrange an equitable scheme of disarmament, but the end in view is well worth straining every nerve to attain. Let us hope that out of the demand now put forward by Germany, there may arise a new and even better effort to banish the fears of fresh antagonisms and hostility.

Herrings and Whitebait.

The remarkably large catches of herrings recorded from Yarmouth yesterday would arouse a keener interest if the British people valued this adaptable fish at its true worth. The customary disdain, indeed, almost deserves to be numbered among the many eighth wonders of the world. It is only in the best clubs and the best restaurants in London and the provinces that one can be sure of finding the fish which ought—so abundant is the supply and so various its virtues—to be the staple food of the British people. And this widespread neglect of potentially the cheapest food supply available to any country in the world is not more surprising than the apathy which is beginning to show towards another English delicacy—whitebait. This, according to reports, has been the worst whitebait season for more than 50 years. It seems probable that the young whiting which prey on whitebait near the coasts have been this year rather more deadly than usual. But a far more likely explanation of a falling supply is a falling demand. The fact is that it is ceasing to pay anyone to catch whitebait, because the restaurants and the fishmongers buy so little. It is impossible to blame them. Their clients have either lost the taste for whitebait or never acquired it. Yet the flavour of freshly cooked whitebait is one of the most distinctive and satisfying that any man can experience. In France blanchailles are deservedly honoured. Whitebait suppers at Greenwich and elsewhere after a dance were a tradition of Victorian England. Gourmets still prize whitebait, but apparently only gourmets. Like other good things whitebait entail trouble. They are cheap to buy, but not cheap to cook, since they require a good deal of oil or butter. And they lose their superb flavour very quickly. So neither the housewife nor the restaurateur is inclined to bother in the absence of a firm public demand. They should be served piping-hot an hour or two after being caught—not an easy thing rapid advance in the science of preserving food, we know comparatively little at present about the science of keeping fish, not only fresh, but as fresh as when it left the sea. Important research work is being conducted in connexion with these problems. The experiment of drying kippers instead of smoking them is one result. In the meantime no sensible man or woman will maintain what has become the traditional attitude towards the herring. He would perhaps be more appreciated if he cost more.

YOUNG MEN AND THEIR CAREERS

By THE EARL OF BIRKENHEAD

THE conditions governing the entry of young men into the world to-day are radically different from those which obtained in the idle pre-war days. Then, so we are told, it was almost customary for the young men to lounge gracefully through life doing nothing.

Some, fortified by a large private allowance, would don the uniform of the Brigade of Guards; others, perhaps, would live in their country houses peacefully mismanaging their accounts. There was a certain stigma attached to commerce; and the Bar was by no means the crowded profession it now is, and offered a certain advancement to talent.

They All Work.

There is nothing more curious than the manner in which the war has altered these conceptions in the minds of young men. What was once graceful has now become contemptible. I know scarcely any young men who do not do some form of work; for those few there is a definite feeling of pity and contempt.

Men whose forbears have for generations decayed happily on their country estates work nine hours a day in city offices; even young men burdened with vast unearned incomes catch the infection, and cast round for some occupation which will rescue them from the odium of the drone.

This tendency is well illustrated at the universities to-day. In the old days many men went up to Oxford and Cambridge from Eton and other great public schools without the slightest intention of passing an examination; they were not even troubled with an entrance examination, but by paying a certain sum of money they were able to slip deftly through the gates.

To be a Suffragette.

Once there, "work" occurred to their minds about as often as the Babylonian Empire; they played games, hunted, shot, drank, and went down.

Now such a life is impossible even for those who wish to lead it; there are entrance and preliminary examinations which have to be passed, or the man is sent down. Besides, there are few men now who go to the universities with such ideas, and the standard of industry is now higher than at any time before.

Thoughts of a career and misty ambitions in that direction stir very early in the human mind. At seven my own career was mapped out. I was to be an engine-driver, and flash northwards on the plate of the Flying Scotsman; a railway accident soon banished this ambition from a mind never very robust, and I next decided to be a doctor, and to devote a well-spent life to alleviating some distresses of motherhood.

Luckily for my potential patients this ambition deserted me when I was twelve; and was replaced by a keen desire to become a suffragette, an ambition which was in its turn discarded owing to the difficulties of changing sex.

Literature claimed me next. Here I was given the lead by my sister, who, at the age of 15, wrote a powerful novel called "The Willful Curate," dealing with a Hampshire incumbent who went to the bad in the New Forest. Fired by this example I produced a self-analytic autobiography at the age of 14 which, had it been published, would have made Beverley Nichols's "Twenty-five" look like the memoirs of an octogenarian.

Games Worship.

The atmosphere of school soon corrected these humanistic tendencies. Here was a new career to be hewed out from a new and peculiar quarry. One looked round and considered what was the surest way of achieving success at school, of becoming a big figure, and so having a good time.

The answer was by excelling at games. There was no other avenue: scholarship was useless, literature distrusted. So we concentrated wildly on games, and those of us who were good at them were raised at once to a wholly spurious eminence. I remember a young band of enthusiasts who tried to break through the rigid tradition of athletic supremacy. They hid pale, eager faces, B.B.C. voices, and willowing walks.

Disciplined Habits.

They collected in corners and conferred on mysterious names, Baudelaire, Ibsen, Matisso. . . The cult made little progress, and I remember that it was forcibly broken up when one of its members was heard saying to another in the school stores: "Cedric, don't you think the sound of running water is perfectly heavenly?"

As I have said, for those who go to the university gives another twist to men's conception of their careers. They go there for the most part to work; at school their one interest is to avoid it. They become adepts at all forms of evasion.

Now they find that at the university they will not be unduly goaded and driven; their hours and their routine will be left to themselves. Their leisure will not be intruded on, but if they do not pass their first examination they are sent down, and if they do badly in their finals they largely discredit themselves in the eyes of the world.

It is there that so many men learn for the first time the habit of disciplined work. Before I went to Oxford I was incapable of prolonged concentration, because I had never occasion to practise it; my time at Oxford certainly taught me that habit.

It is often said that the schools and universities of England are of no use to a man in his future career. To that I would reply that it depends entirely on the man. If a man does not want to educate himself there is not the slightest object in his going to Oxford.

Crowded Professions.

The hunting is better elsewhere, and the climate is foul. If he does, he can derive incalculable advantages from his time at the university. There are excellent facilities for every form of study, there is rough and formidable competition, and there is the opportunity, which other men do not get, of finding one's intellectual level. As to the public schools, why argue about them? Simply take a look at the young men who have been privately educated.

The rush to work has crowded the professions, and it is no easy choice which faces even our intelligent young man to-day. The Bar is slow and precarious, the City depressed, letters the domain of the few. I admire those enterprising people who defy unemployment by breaking new ground.

I know one man who made a large sum by the mass delivery of milk; another who borrowed G. K. Chesterton's ingenuous idea and, preparing questions and repartees, hired himself out to be scored off in company by his clients; another who became the proprietor of an air-taxi, and, lastly, a young man who, sent from home by his exhausted parents to find work, was discovered in the hind legs of the elephant at the Manchester pantomime.

I hope that most of us will avoid such peculiar refuges. This much is certain: that young men to-day contemplate their careers more seriously than they ever have before, and are working at them far harder than they ever did of old. This should be remembered by all those who spend their time crabbing the present generation: there is always the useless minority trailing their alms across the surface of society, and it is wrong to convey a false impression of young men at a whole.

NEW K.C.C. PAVILION

FINE STRUCTURE DESCRIBED

CLUB'S PROUD HISTORY

FRESH LANDMARK

Magnificent and imposing in its artistic facade, grass terraces and splendid interior appointments, the new Kowloon Cricket Club pavilion, which is being officially opened to-morrow, stands as a monument to the progressive policy of the mainland's leading club—a policy which illuminates every page of its history.

Members can rightly feel proud of such a pavilion, for not only is it the finest in the Colony, but it offers facilities for recreations and social activities such as have never before been enjoyed by the club.

An interesting and extremely well produced brochure describing the club house and the history of the club has been circulated by the Committee, and the following extracts give a clear idea as to the magnificence of the new building.

IMPOSING APPROACH.

The New Club-house is situated at the N.W. corner of the Cricket Ground having entrance from Cox's Road and so placed as to allow of a carriage drive and formal garden or forecourt between the building and the road. A car park will also be provided.

This area, when properly completed and laid out, is capable of being formed into a very imposing approach to the Club.

In plan the building is L shaped; the head of the L is however cut off by the walling forming the main entrance facing the road, at the back of which are the administrative offices, the Entrance Hall, Social Rooms and the Social Hall on the main floor. Above is the Orchestra recess flanked on either side by open verandahs terminated by turrets containing small square rooms.

As regards the architecture the building may be said to be of modern style with a classic renaissance motif.

THE STRUCTURE.

The structure, although mainly of one storey, has two basements under the main floor situated at the extremity of either wing, the floor level being six inches or so above the level of the cricket ground. There is also a gallery along one side and one end of the Social Hall, which besides acting as a means of access to a feature verandah flanking either side of the Social Hall, the Scoring Box and the small rooms in the towers.

The materials used in the construction are, for the walls, brick in lime and cement, columns to support the roof over the Social Hall, annexes and verandah. The gallery in the Social Hall is of reinforced concrete.

Internal wall surfaces are finished in ordinary plain plaster except in the Central Hall (where the walls are finished in panelled plasterwork) and the lower portion of the Bar Room which is paneled in teak to a height of 7 ft.

All colourwash is of local materials. In order to minimise the cost of upkeep and cleaning, ornamental work and mouldings, internally and externally, have been employed sparingly.

A gallery, varying from 8 ft. to 4 ft. in width reached from the Entrance Hall on the main floor by a short stair, traverses one side and one end of the Social Hall.

TURFED TERRACES.

Space 18 ft. by 15 ft. is provided at gallery level and over the Entrance Hall and Lobby for a Dance Orchestra.

Doors from the gallery lead out to the open verandah or flat roofs which should provide pleasant accommodation for members to watch games or enjoy the open air. (The supports for this verandah have been designed with sufficient strength to support a roof over the verandah).

A Scoring Box 13 ft. by 12 ft. is placed in the centre of the verandah facing the Cricket Ground.

In the gable on the main roof above the Scoring Box is provided a space for a clock.

Between the Social Hall verandah and the Cricket Ground and in the rear of the building is a turfed terrace 20 ft. wide and 90 ft. long, formed at a level half way between cricket ground and Club-house floor level.

TWO LEFT IN NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE

Starr Holds Brooklyn to Two Hits

New York, Sept. 15. Brooklyn have definitely surrendered any remote hope of the National League pennant, going down to defeat before the Cardinals to-day. They were blanked out, Starr allowing only two safe hits. Collins hit a homer for the Cards.

Pittsburgh and Chicago who remain to contest what struggle may be, both won, though the Cubs took eleven innings to squeeze home 8-7 against the Giants. Ott and Gengish hit for the circuit for the Cubs. Klein hit a home run for the Phillies to place Cincinnati permanently in the cellar. Kamm and Cissell (Cleveland), White (Detroit) and Manush (Washington) hit some home runs in the American League, in which all three leaders were defeated.

THE SEMI-FINAL STAGE

CANADIAN BREAKS COURSE RECORD

Baltimore, Sept. 15.

Francis Ouimet is now a strong favourite for the American Amateur Golf championship, his three most fancied rivals being eliminated to-day in the quarter-finals.

Only one foreigner remains in the contest, Somerville, the Canadian amateur, who displayed brilliant form to-day, breaking the course record in beating Blaney.

In the second round, Yates, the conqueror of Eric McEwen, was eliminated by the American Walker Cup player, McCarthy, who was himself ousted in the quarter-finals. McCarthy beat Yates by two and one and lost by one up.

Somerville, playing Blaney, did the first eighteen holes in 68 strokes, two under par.

QUARTER-FINALS.

The results of the quarter-finals, which were played over thirty-six holes, follow:

Somerville (Canada) beat Blaney (Massachusetts) 6 and 5.

Guilford (Mass.) beat Chick Evans (Chicago) 5 and 4.

F. Ouimet beat Fischer (Kentucky), by one hole.

Goodman (Nebraska) beat McCarthy by one hole.—Reuter.

FOUNTAIN PEN THEFT

PICKPOCKET SENT TO GAOL

Sentence of two months' hard labour was imposed by Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Police Court, this morning, on a coolie who was charged with larceny from the person of an unknown Chinese of a fountain pen.

Defendant was seen to pick the pocket of a Chinese as the latter was about to board a bus outside the Star Ferry Pier, Connaught Road. A district watchman, who had shadowed the defendant, went after him and when he brought him back to where the pen was stolen the complainant had gone, having apparently boarded the bus without realising that he had been robbed.

The defendant claimed that the pen was his, and, in reply to his Worship, said he could write. When handed a sheet of paper and the pen, the defendant enquired whether his Worship desired that he write in English or Chinese.

His Worship:—Both, if you like.

The defendant replied that he could not write English, but would write his name in Chinese.

His Worship then requested that the defendant write his name on the sheet of paper and had just taken the pen out of his own pocket when arrested.

The defendant replied that he could give that evidence verbally, but could not write it.

In rejecting the defendant's story, his Worship passed sentence

FREE HAND FOR THE I.R.A.

FREE STATE'S TRADE DECLINE

The half-year's trade returns of the Irish Free State to the end of June include four months of rule by the Fianna Fail Government. The statistics for the period are not encouraging. One fact alone is outstanding—the adverse balance on the year's trading to that date has risen to £15,137,000. A year previously it was £11,574,000.

Imports for the half year are down by over £700,000, and exports by nearly £2,500,000. Trade with countries other than Great Britain and Northern Ireland in June last represented 28.25 per cent. of all imports and 2.5 per cent. of all exports and in the six months January to June 19.7 per cent. of all imports and 3.1 per cent. of all exports.

The total trade of the Free State (including re-exports) for the six months January to June amounted to £89,000,000 this year, as against £42,200,000 in 1931, excess of imports for the period being £9,700,000 as against £7,000,000 in 1931.

The £2,000,000 Fund

After a two-days' debate, the Dail gave its sanction to the raising of a fund of £2,000,000, which is to be the war chest for carrying on the economic fight with England.

Mr. de Valera denied that the Government had any secret agreement with the Irish Republican Army. He also denied that there had been any importation of arms, but when asked if the Government were prepared to take up arms and prevent drilling he said that provided there was no attempt to bring arms or to display arms there would be no attempt to prevent drilling. The Government would not go out after the arms already in the hands of individuals, "because it is not in the public interest that this should be done." It would be stupid of the Government to try to get these arms.

OBITUARY

DEATH OF WORLD-FAMOUS GYNAECOLOGIST

London, Sept. 15. One of the world's leading gynaecologists, Sir Henry Simson, is dead in London. Sir Henry attended the birth of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret.

He married an actress, Miss Lona Ashwell, and closely associated himself with theatrical productions.—Reuter's Special.

Sir Henry John Forbes Simson, the eminent British surgeon, was born at Barroilly, India, in 1872.

His father was a member of the Bengal Civil Service. Sir Henry Simson was, however, sent home to Edinburgh for education and took the M.B. and C.M. degrees at the university. After holding posts in some of the chief hospitals of the Scottish capital, he travelled abroad for about a year to gain wider experience, making his longest stay in Egypt. He then started practice in London.

Specialising in obstetrics, he was appointed surgeon to the Hospital for Women and the West London Hospital and was also made examiner in obstetrics to the Conjoint Board, London, and the University of Leeds. In 1908 he married.

The Bedside Manner.

Sir Henry Simson's professional manner was particularly happy and even his colleagues were sometimes surprised at the ease and rapidity with which he gained the confidence of patients. A tall, slim, clean-shaven man with smiling eyes, he seemed to dissipate dread by his more approachable manner.

He was probably the only eminent doctor who had preached in a London church. One afternoon he found awaiting him a letter from "Dick" Sheppard, the famous vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, inviting him to address the congregation. "Come in your ordinary kit," the letter ran, "and don't let the fact that you are in

NAVY "WONDER" COMING TO HONGKONG

PREPARATIONS FOR SEASON

VENUE PROBLEM

(By "Veritas")

Glad news has been received by the Hongkong Boxing Association. A. B. Flaggott, whose weight out here is as yet unknown, is coming to join the China Fleet and according to Jim Cartledge is "good enough to beat anybody at his weight in the Far East."

This should act as a much-wanted stimulant to the Association who are faced with the unhappy problem of as yet having no venues in which to stage their events this winter.

Anyhow the Association is making all preparations for the forthcoming season, and will be in the fortunate position of staging not only popular A. B. Ewin, but also Pete Judge, who recently fought a magnificent draw with Joe Beckett the U.S. Mariner "champ" in Shanghai.

Ewin's record in Hongkong is an impressive one and his appearance on the scene is always a splendid attraction. He has held not only the middleweight title, but the welterweight championship, and reports indicate that he is in fine fighting trim in readiness for this winter's engagements.

The Association are facing the problem of having no City Hall at their disposal for the staging of the events. It is quite on the cards that the Lee Theatre will be secured, whilst there is a suggestion that attempts be made to obtain the use of the V.R.C. bath. If the latter course be adopted and the promoters successful in their endeavour, it will mean open-air tournaments which must of necessity be something of a drawback in that they will be dependent on the weather.

HOLE-IN-ONE HABIT

HAVERS DOES IT AGAIN

Arthur Havers, of Sandy Lodge, can claim a place among those who make a habit of holding tee shots. He has just accomplished his sixth hole in one. This was at the eighteenth hole on his home course—a hole that strikes terror into the novice because of the towering bunker which almost obliterates the daylight, just in front of the tee.

Havers has holed out in one at the first hole at Royal Norwich, the fourteenth hole at Prince's (Sandwich), the seventeenth at Coombe Hill, the third at Frinton, and the sixth at Hecketh.

Of these, the holing of the fourteenth at Prince's (Sandwich) was undoubtedly the best. He played a full cleek shot against a strong wind on that occasion.

LOCAL GOLF.

REUNION OF THE GOLFING MEMBERS OF K.C.C.

Arrangements have been made for the annual reunion of golfing members of the Kowloon Cricket Club, which will take place at Kowloon City, by permission of the Kowloon Golf Club, on Sunday, 26th September.

Members of the Kowloon Golf Club are requested to note that starting times have been reserved for this match from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The Mead Shield will be competed for on Medal Play over 18 holes. This shield was first put up for competition when the Kowloon Cricket Club had a golfing section and shared the King's Park course with the United Services Recreation Club and the Bowling Green Club. When King's Park was taken over by the Government, the Kowloon Golf Club was formed and a course developed at Kowloon City. In the formation of the Kowloon Golf Club the three Clubs already mentioned played a prominent part, and each year the Kowloon Golf Club grants the use of the course for the annual reunion of K.C.C. golfers, many of whom are among the founders of the Club.

Members of the Kowloon Cricket Club who wish to participate are requested to sign the list which has been posted at the K.C.C. Club House or to send their names (together with handicaps, if any) to the Secretary, Mr. W. L. Price, c/o the Chamber of Commerce. Titles will be arranged for on the 26th at the

Y.M.C.A. LOSE

GOOD SHOW WITH

RECREIO WELL BALANCED

In view of the fact that they turned out a weak team, whilst the Recreio were strongly represented, the Y.M.C.A. second eleven did well in a friendly hockey match against the Portuguese yesterday.

The Recreio won 3-1, but their first goal was scored when the "Y's" were without a custodian, whilst a weakness in the middle line afforded the "Recs" plenty of attacking opportunities.

On the whole the exchanges were even and well contested. Owen played splendidly at right half for the losers, whilst Burnett, in addition to scoring the "Y's" only goal after a brilliant run, was a constant source of danger to the Recreio defence, and with a bit of luck would have netted on more occasions.

The Recreio revealed balance and did not have a really weak spot in the team.

SCHOOLBOY'S BOWLING FEAT AT LORDS

Taunton School Student Takes 12 for 72

London, Sept. 2.

J. H. Cameron of Taunton School, playing at Lords for "The Rest" against the Lord's Schools, took all ten wickets for 49 runs.

In the second innings, he took the only two wickets that fell for 23 runs. The feat was thus the remarkable one of 12 wickets in succession for 72 runs.

16 YEARS OLD.

Cameron is 16 years of age. He was born in Jamaica. His father, Dr. J. Cameron, toured England with the West Indies team in 1906. He used to play with W. G. Grace.

When young Cameron came to school in Somerset he was a batsman, coached by his father. He learned to bowl in England and was taught by Mr. A. G. Marshall, the Somerset player, to bowl slow leg breaks.

Cameron's action and technique are excellent. He can make the ball turn fast and he can bowl the googly well.

OFFER MADE.

Somerset have approached him about playing for the County. "I am not sure about taking up cricket seriously," he declared. Cameron however is to go to Oxford from Taunton, and there he may find that serious cricket has attractions for him.

Somerset moreover are not likely to let so promising a young player escape them. Googly bowlers are too rare for that.

GERMAN GOLF TITLE

PERCY ALLIS BEATEN BY A FRENCHMAN

Bad Ems, Aug. 14.

The German open golf championship was won to-day by Auguste Boyer (France), who, for the four rounds returned a score of 282. He had a final round of 68.

Percy Allis (England) was second with 283 and Henry Cotton (England) tied for third place with A. J. Lacey (England) at 288.

Lacey and Allis were leading with scores of 141 at the end of the second round, and after three rounds Allis was three strokes in front of Boyer (211 against 214), with Cotton and Lacey a stroke further behind.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Robert Montgomery is a quiet, soft-spoken person who displays none of the wise-cracking characteristics which are usually associated with his work on the screen. He does have, however, a fine sense of broad humour. The charm which won him stardom in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures is readily discernible when he speaks. Overworked as they are when used in conjunction with screen stars, the words "honest" and "modest" seem most applicable to this young player, who is starred in "But the Flesh is Weak," coming to the Queen's Theatre on Sunday. He is honest in telling of his pleasure at finding himself popular. Most players tell of how weary they are of the crowd's adulation. Not Robert Montgomery. He gets a big kick out of the crowds that flock to see him in person whenever he is recognized. But on the other hand, his modesty is shown by his dress and demeanour, neither of which are of the order that would attract any undue attention. Montgomery dresses and behaves like any other nice young fellow who has found himself a pretty good berth in life.

"Careless Lady." When every feminine head last year was adorned with an Empire Eugenic—due in a large degree to the fact that it was the wearing of one of those chapaneux in "East Lynne"—the public suddenly awoke to the fact that many type innovations are set by the film industry. Gifted designers work right up to the last minute in preparing the gowns a screen star will display in her current picture, and a novelty in material or hat trimming that first appears on the silver sheet often becomes the newest fashion note in the modistes' shops soon after. Not so widely-recognized, however, is the collateral fact that styles in other fields than feminine attire are also frequently set by the movies. Modern furniture and interior decorating, for example, would still be confined to a few European saloons had not the screen popularized the new idea and brought about a world-wide demand for chromium-plated chairs and plate-glass chandeliers.

In "Careless Lady," the Joan Bennett John Boles comedy romance showing at the King's Theatre to-day, the wide variety of settings taxed the ingenuity of the art director Joseph Wright. Opening in a grim little New England town, the locale shifts to style centres and fashionable resorts in New York and then to similar spots in Paris, each necessarily different in design and treatment.

"Night Court" at the Queen's. Phillips Holmes, who is featured in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Night Court," which is showing at the Queen's Theatre, didn't seek his film career. It came to him while he was a student at Princeton. Holmes, son of Taylor Holmes, noted stage actor, had no intention of entering films. But when a motion picture company used the college campus for a location a few years ago, the director picked him out of a crowd of college boys for a special part. The result, "Night Court," is a comedy in which Holmes plays Lewis Stone's daughter in "Night Court." Miss Carville first faced the camera in "The Great Lover" and has since been seen in "Hotel Continental" and as the blushing newly-wed in "Grand Hotel."

"Wings" at the Oriental. Jobyna Ralston will not bob her hair. Although the charming young featured player who has an important role in "Wings" for Paramount, has wanted to have the tresses shorn for some time, some obstacle has always stood in the way. First, it was a contract with Harold Lloyd which called for curls while playing with the comedian and now it is a marriage contract with Richard Arlen. Arlen is prejudiced against the job. "Grounds for divorce," he says. So Jobyna still carries her curls. Arlen and Ralston were sweethearts when they played "Sweetheart" in "Wings," which, with its famous Souda synchronization, is now showing at the Oriental Theatre.

"Caught Cheating." For an hour's laughter scrambled with some good thrills and wrapped up in a real plot, we heartily recommend "Caught Cheating," the Tiffany production in which Charlie Murray and George Sidney and an excellent cast are to be seen at the Oriental Theatre.

Sidney is all aquiver and shies at every shadow until Murray comes along and promises to give him his million dollar's worth of business if Sidney will show him all the wild sights of the big town—in other words, accompany him to the Artists' Masked Ball with a couple of beautiful janes.

to honour in a sense of justice international good will and friendship, to take over existing obligations and to respect the principle of the Open Door and equal opportunity—domestic and foreign policies which are all very fair and aboveboard. On March 10 the Manchukuo Government sent a communication to Japan and on the 16th to other countries in which they repeated the above programme and requested them to establish normal diplomatic relations with Manchukuo.

"With serious concern and minute attention the Imperial Japanese Government have closely followed the development of conditions in Manchukuo during the last half year, and have come to recognize that Manchukuo's sincerity and determination to carry out the above policies can be relied upon.

"For instance, Manchukuo has established a special committee in order to prepare for the abolition of Extraterritoriality, opening up of the interior to all foreigners and other treaty revisions; and in this regard its attitude, directed as it has been at the attainment of desired revision through agreement with the Powers concerned, and without resorting to any unilateral measure of termination, has been particularly notable.

"Measures which have been for the reform of financial and other systems have also obtained appreciable results. Thus Manchukuo is now steadily developing into full maturity as an independent state, and is assured of a future full of promise.

"In consideration of the attitude of Manchukuo to the domestic and foreign problems above referred to, and of Japan's interest in Manchuria as a region of vital importance of her national defence and the existence of her people, the Imperial Japanese Government, have to secure tranquility in this region as soon as possible and to guarantee for all time to come the foundations of security of her Empire and the peace of the Far East. With these purposes in view Government instructed General Muto, His Majesty's Ambassador, to sign on this date a protocol recording the agreement concluded with the Manchukuo authorities, and thus accorded formal recognition to that country.

"That Japan's action in this connexion is not derogatory to any treaty to which they are party has been made clear in the address of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, made in the Imperial Diet on August 25.

"The Protocol confirms the fact that Manchukuo is an independent State organized in accordance with the free will of its inhabitants, and it stipulates that all rights and interests which Japan and her subjects possess within the territory of Manchukuo by virtue of treaties and other agreements are to be confirmed and respected, thus doing away once and for all with all pending disputes concerning these rights and interests.

"Recognizing the fact that any menace to Manchuria constitutes at the same time a threat to the safety and existence of the Empire, the Protocol further provides that Japan and Manchukuo are to co-operate in the maintenance of their nationals' security and that the Japanese forces necessary for this purpose are to be stationed in Manchukuo.

"It is the object of the Protocol thus to establish a perpetual relationship of good neighbourhood between the two countries and to secure the peace of the Far East.

"On several occasions the Japanese Government have declared that they have no territorial designs in Manchuria, and the preamble of the Protocol reaffirms that both contracting Powers will mutually respect each other's territorial rights.

"As regards the economic activities of foreigners, the Manchukuo Government made clear in their communication of March 10 above alluded to that they would observe the principle of the Open Door.

"What Japan desires in Manchuria is to do away with all anti-foreign policies there so that the region may become a safe place of abode for natives and foreigners alike, while at the same time guaranteeing her legitimate rights and interests there; and therefore it is hardly necessary to repeat the assurance that Japan sincerely hopes that all peoples of the world will pursue their economic activities in Manchuria on a footing of equal opportunity and will thereby contribute to the development and prosperity of that region.

"It is safely retrospected that the world will come to have peace and earnest effort of Manchukuo to carry out its foreign and domestic policy, and that the Powers will make no long delay in establishing diplomatic relations with it.

"In according formal recognition to Manchukuo, the Japanese Government desire to express hearty wishes for the future of the country and the fervent hope that our people will spare no effort in fulfilling the duty of a friendly neighbour, so that the two countries may live and flourish together in common prosperity."

No Conference Demand.

Shanghai, Sept. 15.

The Finance Minister, Mr. T. V. Soong, interviewed by Reuters today declared China had decided not to demand a Nine Power Conference.—Reuters.

Trade Union Protest

Shanghai, Sept. 15.

Various trade unions in Shanghai have addressed a joint telegram to the Nanking Government urging it to recall Chinese diplomatic and consular officials from Japan in view of Japan's formal recognition of Manchukuo. The telegram points out that under present circumstances there is no more friendship between China and Japan and there can be no further diplomatic dealings between the two countries.

They also urge the Government not to enter into diplomatic negotiations with the Japanese Minister to China, giving him only such treatment as is due a foreign diplomatic representative.—Reuters Special.

London Anxiety

London, Sept. 15.

Acute anxiety has been created in diplomatic and well-informed quarters by the announcement of the Japanese recognition of Manchukuo. The text of the note has not yet been published, but the effects of the recognition, which have been seriously debated during the past month, have been largely discounted. The decision does not come as a surprise.

The gravity in the Far East is everywhere recognised. The News Chronicle says the position, from the viewpoint of international morality, could not be worse and refers to the "deplorable rake's progress" of British policy, which afforded "encouragement to the Japanese militarists" to go from strength to strength until now the Japanese proclaim defiantly that as far as they are concerned, the League of Nations, America and the Lytton Report can all go to a hotter place than Jericho.

The paper predicts gloomy prospects for the world "as long as Japanese imperialism is undefeated" and says that as a settlement cannot be accomplished by mediation or conciliation, the task is to help Chinese nationalism to defeat Japanese imperialism.—Reuters.

Italy Neutral

Rome, Sept. 15.

There has been no surprise in Italy as the Japanese recognition of Manchukuo was expected. The average Italian regards the recognition as the inevitable result of the pressure of economic forces driving Japan to seek stable markets for the expansion of her trade and population. Italians are inclined to sympathize, considering that Japan, like Fascist Italy, must find outlets. To oppose the Japanese penetration of a country which is under populated and under developed would be hypocrisy in Italian eyes, even running counter to the Fascist theories of developing the natural wealth of a country.

No Official Comment.

Official quarters decline to comment until they have further details. A prominent official declared "Our main concern is to maintain peace, to avoid a new armaments race, and to preserve markets for Italian trade in the Far East. Italy is quite neutral."

The situation is being watched with the closest attention, because of the League repercussions. It is realized that the future of the League may depend on its handling of the Manchurian problem.—Reuters.

In America

Washington, Sept. 15.

That Japan's recognition of Manchukuo will not precipitate a new move until the Lytton report is considered, is the opinion gathered from the State Department by the correspondent of the New York Times. Any representations by the United States consul at Harbin for increased protection against brigandage would not constitute recognition of the new state, even by implication.

If China seeks to invoke the Nine Power Pact, the State Department will "not act until the Lytton Report is published, or any other event which will make it necessary to take action."

Uncle Arthur—Optimist

GERMAN EQUALITY CLAIMS

London, Sept. 15. Germany's arms equality claim and the impending resumption of the Disarmament Conference are affording lively topics of discussion in interested circles.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, the President of the Disarmament Conference, speaking to-day at the National Peace Council luncheon, said:

"I cannot bring myself to believe that the statesmen who will assemble at Geneva in the next few days are prepared to take the responsibility of encouraging a competitive race in armaments and the inevitable danger of war arising from the existence of armies, navies and air forces."

"The apprehension that exists, in no way causes surprise, but I do not fully share the apprehension because I am convinced that the failure of this Disarmament Conference would be a terrible disaster in the life of Europe and the world."

"I refuse to contemplate a failure."

Referring to Germany's equality claim, he thought they could go forward with their work next week feeling that with good-will and conciliation this incident could be settled to the advantage not only of Germany and the vanquished countries but of Europe and the world.—British Wireless.

OFFICIAL ATTITUDE.

London, Sept. 15. It is learned that the German armaments claim has been under discussion at the Foreign Office during the last two or three days. No definite decisions have been reached. The Foreign Office is still considering what the British attitude shall be.—Reuter.

Letters of administration have been granted to Woo Lim-shi, widow of Woo Pak-luk, who was shot dead in Butterfield and Swire's office a few months ago. The estate has been valued at $4,100.

The Earl of Harewood, who gave evidence before the Sweepstakes Commission yesterday.

LEGALISED SWEEPS

LORD HAREWOOD'S OPINION

JOCKEY CLUB IN OPPOSITION

(Special to "Telegraph.")

London, Sept. 15. From the standpoint of horse-racing interests, the Jockey Club opposes sweepstakes.

This statement was made to-day by the Earl of Harewood, husband of the Princess Royal and the Senior Steward of the Jockey Club, giving evidence before the Royal Commission on Lotteries and Betting.

SMALL SWEEPS INNOCUOUS.

Lord Harewood acknowledged that small sweeps were innocuous, but the big ones, he said, resulted in a swelling of the field with horses which have no possible chance of winning.

Negotiations with the promoters of the Calcutta Sweep had checked abuses liable to result from their activities, and the same applied to the Stock Exchange Sweep and, to some extent, to the Irish Hospital Sweep.

GANDHI TO BE FREED

GOVERNMENT AND FAST THREAT

PROPOSALS OUTLINED

London, Sept. 15. The Government's intentions regarding Mr. Gandhi, in view of his vow to begin on September 20th a "fast unto death," were announced in the Legislative Assembly at Simla this afternoon.

The proposals are set out in the following statement issued by the India Office in London: "Gandhi has made it clear by his correspondence with the Prime Minister that he proposes to starve himself to death, not as a protest against his detention, or against the measures taken to deal with civil disobedience generally, nor with the object of securing his release, but on a point of principle which is not related to the civil disobedience movement."

AT LIBERTY.

"It has been decided that as soon as Mr. Gandhi actually begins his fast he should be removed from jail to a suitable place of private residence and the only restriction that will be imposed upon him there, as at present contemplated, is that he should be served with an order directing him to remain there."

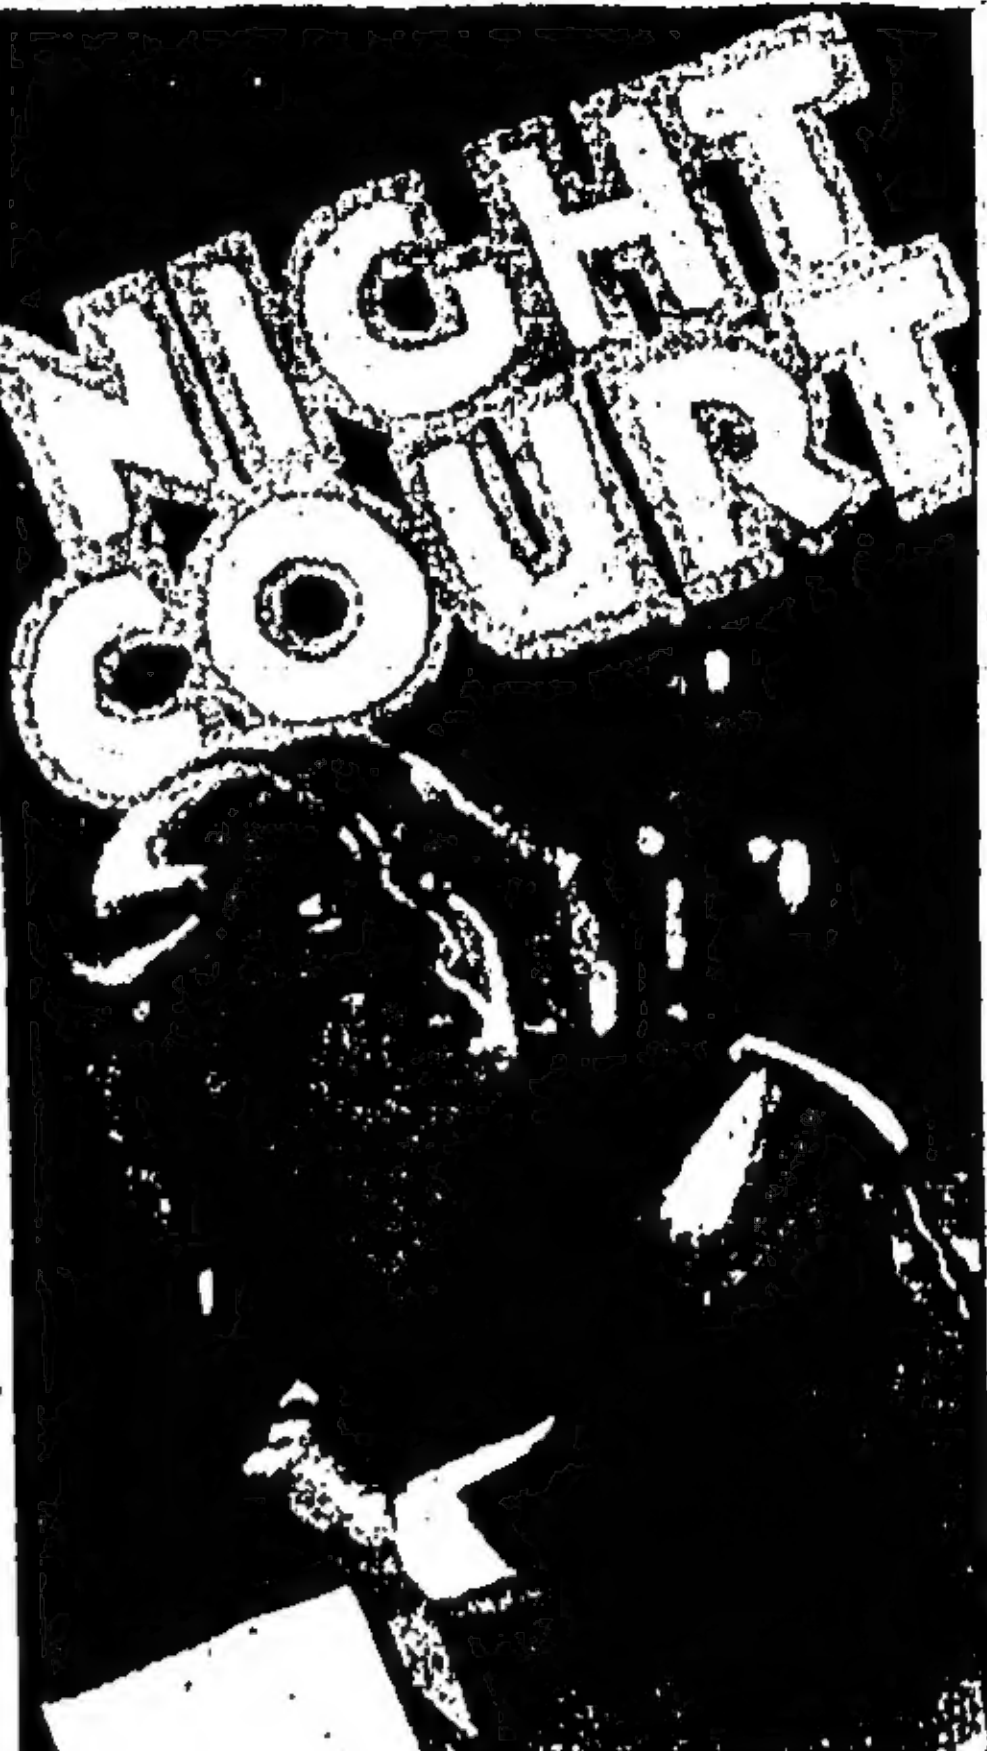

"It is hoped that it will prove unnecessary to impose any further restriction on Mr. Gandhi but this is a matter that will depend primarily on whether the liberty accorded to him is found to lend itself to the promotion of the civil disobedience movement, or any similar agitation directed against the Government, or to affect the maintenance of law and order."—British Wireless.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

A more serious objection, said Lord Harewood, remained in the opportunity for fraud offered by sweepstakes. There would be less danger to sporting interests if sweepstakes were legalised and placed under some form of Government control.—Reuter.
